18 HURT IN CRASH AT TERMINAL

Eighteen persons, mainly women and children—were crushed in a crowd of several hundred to-day at the South Station when the Newport special backed down into the buffer of track 16, crashed through buffer and iron gateway as if they were paper and drove the rear car into the struggling throng.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCormick, Mrs. Edwin Smith and Miss Marjorie Daly were taken to the Relief Station, where they were treated for bruises and abrasions. In the confusion people lost handbags, umbrellas, purses and money.

In the jam of people in the train's pathway and in the stampeded crowd that fought frantically to escape the great car that was catapulted into the thronged station platform scores were knocked down. The panic that followed caused even more injuries than the wreck itself.

Many Are Trampled Upon.

At least three persons were caught between the end of the train and the solid cigar stand that stands within twenty feet of the end of track 16 and were severely injured. The other victims were caught in the crowd which fought to escape from the pathway of the train, and were either trampled upon or pushed by fear.

The wide South station "midway," as it is known, was unusually crowded when the accident occurred at 5:30 o'clock and there was a particularly large throng—estimated at fully 200—struggling about the gateway to track 16, where the Newport special was to leave.

The special, which carries passengers at 5:30 a head to Newport and return, is due to leave at 5:30 o'clock. It is made up and shunted into the station about twenty minutes before that time. To-day the space about the track gateway for fully fifty feet was jammed with passengers waiting for the gates to open to obtain seats on the special.

The train backed down at high speed. For a reason not yet determined by the railroad officials the brakes failed to work and the car ran far into the big buffer at the end of the track with a terrific crash.

Those nearest the gate realized that a frightful wreck was imminent. Women screamed and men shouted and there was a stampede to escape.

Hurties Into Throng.

SWORD FISH WRECKS DORY

The cargoes of fish that came into Boston to-day were among the best in years, but the fish stories that came with them were even better.

The schooner M. Madeline brought in a yarn of a 2500 pound swordfish which Captain McComber harpooned off Georges Banks last Thursday. A fisherman named John McGraw was assigned to go after the fish in a dory and tow it to the schooner. McGraw picked up the buoy at the peaceful end of the line and started for the Madeline. Then things happened. The fish turned and charged the boat. Its sword pierced the bottom of the boat, and then went through the seat near where McGraw sat. The fish withdrew the sword and the dory began to sink. McGraw rowed rapidly for the Madeline and the fish charged again. Three comrades put out from the schooner in another dory and the fish turned and charged them. A fatal thrust from the relafooring dory finished Mr. Swordfish.

TAFT LIGHTENS THREE JAIL TERMS

BEVERLY, Aug. 25.—Announcement was made to-day by the President's secretary, Fred Carpenter, that President Taft had commuted the prison sentences of Harland, Higgins and Hilton in the Southern peonage cases to six months. The President decided to intervene in the sentences of the laborers on the application made to the President last week by Attorney-General Wickersham.

Senator Nelson A. Aldrich of Rhode Island and Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh had an appointment for a conference with the President at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the tariff and monetary commissions.

Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to England, has an appointment for 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

SOLDIERS QUIT; 240 BLOWN UP

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—Two hundred and forty men were killed by the blowing up of the Yemen Barracks in the Mahdist rebellion against the Turkish government in the Yemen district of Arabia, according to a dispatch received to-day by the Morgenpost.

The soldiers ordered to march against the rebels refused because they had not been paid. Grand Vizier Hilmi Pacha telegraphed orders to pay the men at once.

LATHAM CLIPS TWO RECORDS IN AIRSHIPS

RHEIMS, Aug. 26.—Hubert Latham established a new speed record to-day by flying 43½ miles in 1 hour 1 minute 51 1-5 seconds. Latham was the fastest aviator on the ground, being in the air almost continuously. On his fourth flight he made 6½ miles in 9 minutes, against the fast time of Paulhan, who made 6½ miles in 12 minutes.

As Latham passed the grand stand this afternoon on his ninth lap around the track the 50,000 spectators went frantic with excitement. Latham used his new machine, No. 20, for this flight.

Latham came down on his fourth flight after he had covered about 125 kilometers or 95.01 miles. Paulhan's record for distance made yesterday was 83¼ miles.

After some dispute as to a flight made earlier in the day it was decided that Latham had covered three rounds in 25 minutes 3-5 seconds, or 12, seconds better than the Wright machine's record.

Latham also broke the record for distance.

Thousands of American cheered Glenn H. Curtiss in a wonderful flight to-day. After remaining in the air 28 minutes and 59 3-5 seconds he had covered thirty kilometers with no indication of descending.

Curtiss made three rounds of the course with the total time of 28 minutes 29 3-5 seconds, which was two-fifths of a second slower than the time of Tissandier on Sunday.

Curtiss started out with the intention of winning the long distance prize and if possible, eclipsing the Paulhan record. The American aviator also announced to-day that he would compete for the Grand Prix de la Champagne and not in the speed contest.

The regulations for the International Cup on Saturday were published to-day. The international representatives will compete as follows:

Competitors on Saturday.

America—Glenn H. Curtiss in the Herring-Curtiss bi-plane.

England—Cockburn in a Farman bi-plane.

France—Lefebvre in a Wright bi-plane; Rietzen in a Blériot monoplane; Latham in an Antoinette mon.plane.

W.J. CLOTHIER WINS AFTER A GREAT MATCH

NEWPORT, Aug. 26.—In a magnificent contest of four sets William J. Clothier of Philadelphia defeated M. A. McLoughlin of California in the final round of the all-comers tennis tourney on the Casino courts today. Score: 7-5, 6-4, 9-11, 6-3.

Not since the days of the championship visit of the English players, R. L. and R. F. Doherty, has this country seen such an exhibition of tennis as was put up to-day in the finals. The battle waged before the largest gallery ever seen here and the applause manifested itself in frequent cheering, quite unlike the soft hand clapping of society. After three sets recess was taken with two sets in favor of the American representative.

In the first two sets Clothier won by 7-5, 6-4, but then McLoughlin came back so strongly as to capture the third by the score of 11-9. After a recess they went at it again, and the veteran had his easiest set, winning 6-3.

Clothier, the champion of 1906 and runner-up for the years of 1903 and 1904, pulled entirely on his steadiness and the weakness of his opponent. McLoughlin made a whirlwind exhibition of playing. He went at Clothier hammer and tongs from the start, his volleys belng the hardest ever seen in great match playing.

The weather was ideal for the contest to decide whether the East of West would win the right to challenge William A. Larned, the national champion, for his title.

Before the contest began it was announced that McLoughlin and Melville H. Long also of California had been chosen for the American team that goes to Australia in quest of the Davis International Challenge Cup.

These two players, youths of 19 years, and the youngest that have ever held positions on an American team, or the team of any other nation for that matter, will probably be accompanied by an eastern player, and Raymond D. Little, captain of the team of three years ago, is being sought to give his consent to make the long trip across the Pacific.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Chicago, Aug. 26.—Sure enough it was getaway day for the Speed Boys to-day. They not only leave the south side grounds for this series, but it's good-bye until 1910.

And it was some celebration—this getaway day. A double-header was on the cards, which meant a grand scrap. The Speed Boys, by tying the two games, would move into second place, providing, of course, that the Tigers grab the last from the Athletics. Also the White Sox could move into the first division—again providing that the Washington Senators can lick the Cleveland Naps.

Which same gave both teams something to strive for.

Manager Lake had Cicotte and Arellanes's warming up. One or the other was prepared to start the first game. The foxy manager of the Speed Boys was longing for Charlie Hall, the boy who held the Sox safely in the first game. But the pitcher with the ninepiece thumb was hundreds of miles away. He will join in Cleveland.

Manager Sullivan had Walsh and Smith on the warming pan. One of these gents was booked to start the afternoon's row.

The weather was hot once more and the crowd huge. Wonderful how the people flock to the south side these days when it's pretty generally understood that the Sox haven't a chance in the world for the pennant. Maybe the boys from Boston are the magnet.

THE EEL GOES MILE IN 2:03¾ AT READVILLE

READVILLE RACE TRACK, Aug. 26.—The Eel, the Canadian wonder in harness in the pacing division of the American Derby, this forenoon was worked a trial in 2:03¾ driven by Trainer McKeown. It was the fastest mile over the track this year.

Ed Geers stepped his undefeated trotter, The Harvester, a circle of the track in 2:04¾ in preparation for his great battle in the $10,000 Charter Oak stake when he meets another invincible to date in Bo Douglass, the Boston stallion in the string of Lon McDonald.

Geers, too, had out his pacing gelding, Walter W., that will start next week in the 2:06 pace, and stepped him in 2:05 with something to spare.

About all of the big stables are located at the track, there being besides Geers and McDonald, Pickersgill, Murphy, Benyon, Cox, Lasell, Durfee and Renick.

Billy Andrews is expected to-morrow with Hamburg Belle, that will meet Uhlan here the final day of the Grand Circuit meeting, and with Walter Francis, entered in the Futurity stake. Bob Proctor will also arrive on the same train with Uhlan. Others due are Bertha C., in the Futurity, and Sonoma Girl, Lottie Crabtree's mare, that will start in the American Derby.

W. L. STURTEVANT DEAD.

Wilder L. Sturtevant, son of Ralph M. Sturtevant, a wealthy real estate man of Somerville, died in the Somerville City Hospital this morning after an operation for appendicitis.

BRUHM IS SAFE YET IN SALEM

While golers watch is being kept along the North Atlantic coast from Eastport, Me., to New York for the appearance of Clyde C. Bruhm and his knockabout boat Savage, Salem people are stalling with interest to-day the mysterious career in the Witch City of this suave young man who made such a sensational escape from Boston city prison last Tuesday when he was being booked on wholesale burglary charges.

It is known that Bruhm returned to Salem Tuesday night and sailed away in the Savage from Salem Willows in company with another youth thought to be Harry Wingate, with whom Bruhm had roomed for a month at Mrs. Pribell's at No. 73 Summer street, Salem.

Canoe May Be a Clue.

Wingate's red canoe is missing from its moorings at Moulton's boat landing at the Willows. The last report of the Savage and Bruhm is that he was seen on the Rockland boat. Colonel Hale spied a red canoe on the deck of the Savage, which is regarded as evidence that Wingate is with Bruhm.

Conspicuous in Society.

This last Summer Bruhm was more conspicuous in Salem and particularly at the Willows than ever before during four Summers he has been around here. He was a social favorite with the college element of Juniper, Salem Willows. He was particularly attentive to a young woman of this city, a member of the Juniper colony.

The name of this young woman, who is mentioned in the bond of arrests regarding Bruhm, is withheld out of consideration to her and her family.

Clyde C. Bruhm was a youth of mystery, even to his friends in Salem. He ap-

MAD SAILOR ATTACKS MUTE BOY AT SEA

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Passengers on the Hamburg-American steamer Graf Waldersee, on her arrival her to-day, told of a thrilling five minutes at sea last Tuesday night, when Paul Hunchbird, a coal trimmer, temporarily crazed by the heat, dashed up out of the stoke hole to the main deck and then into the ship's first-class alleys, creating a semi-panic.

As the madman ran through the starboard saloon alley he met Frederick Berger, an eight-year-old deaf mute, who lives in Norrinanton, Mass. He grabbed the lad and ran with him. The boy's peculiar cry attracted the attention of Quartermaster O'Shea, who gave the alarm. The maniac was quickly overpowered.

CASHMAN & CO GET BRIDGE CONTRACT

The Norfolk County Commissioners have awarded the contract for the building of the new concrete bridge to be built over the Charles River, joining the town of Needham and Newton, to John Cashman, Sons & Co. of West Quincy. Cashman's bid was $47,000 against $24,000 bid by Cashman Bros. of Boston. The bridge is to be thirty three feet wide and will have two arches.

SCHOONER IS ROBBED.

Allen Whelan of No. 487 Albion street, Somerville, was arrested to-day, charged with the larceny of clothing valued at $20 and $11 in money, the property of William W. Evans, a fisherman on the schooner Madeline, at T wharf. He will be arraigned in court to-morrow morning.

Man Meets Death in Collision at North Scituate, Two Others Injured—Women Hurt in Cambridge Runaway.

One man was killed and eight persons were injured in two auto accidents to-day. The smashups occurred in North Scituate and in Cambridge.

In Scituate Accident.

Killed—Richard Brown of Brookline.

Injured—Richard L. Creasey; Fred Hussey.

In Cambridge Crash.

Injured—Miss Bertha Clipperly, Troy, New York; Miss Elizabeth Seamon of Long Island, New York; Miss Ella De Freest, Troy, New York; Ezra F. Breed, Lexington; Zadoc Sherman; Mrs. Carl F. Wiegand.

Three Are Run Down.

The killing at North Scituate to-day came when one of two automobiles which were racing along the road ran three pedestrians down.

The man who was killed was Richard Brown of Brookline, who has been staying at the Summer Cottage, North Scituate.

The injured men are:

Richard L. Creecy, No. 48 Harris street, Brookline. Face and body bruised and injured. Will recover.

Fred Hussey, Brookline. Severely bruised about head and shoulders. Will recover.

The three young men, all about seventeen years old, were chums in Brookline, had been staying this Summer at Scituate. They were on a tramp to-day and were returning to their cottage at the beach by the way of North Scituate road. When they had passed Bound Brook Inn, they heard the sound of autos coming at high speed behind them. They stepped to the side of the road.

A long, low racing car went by at a high rate of speed. The dust raised by the car blinded the chauffeur of a second car of the same build which followed. There was also a horse and wagon in the road. The chauffeur of the second car was confused by the dust, the walkers and the wagon, and his car swerved.

Car Demolishes Wagon.

The three young men were struck, and then the car swept across the road, struck the wagon, completely demolishing it. In the wagon were Clarence Reddy and C. M. Mitchell. Both of them escaped injuries, though they were bruised by being thrown into the road.

The police of Scituate were notified and set out to find the chauffeur of the racing car. Chief Hall of the racing autos are said to be owned in Sursdie, Hull. The injured men were taken care of in nearby houses, and the parents of the dead man in Brookline, notified. They set out for Scituate with the parents of the injured young men.

Six Hurt in Cambridge.

Four women and two men were injured in the Cambridge accident on Harvard street, near Bigelow street at noon to-day. One of the women and two men were badly burned when the car which crashed into a tree overturned and caught fire.

The car contained Mrs. Carl M. Wiegand, of The Ridgeway, Wakefield, and three women guests, besides the chauffeur and a guide. It was returning from a sight-seeing trip through Lexington and Concord.

The other occupants of the car were Miss Bertha Clipperey of Troy, N. Y.; Miss Elizabeth Seamon of Long Island, N. Y., and Miss Ella DeFreest of Troy, N. Y. The car was in charge of Chauffeur Ezra F. Breed of Lexington and Guide Zade Sherman, also of Lexington. All were injured.

Just before reaching Bigelow siret in Harvard there is a slight downgrad grade. The car was speeding down this. When about half way down the chauffeur tried to turn out for a team. The steering gear broke and the car jumped and veered toward the sidewalk and crashed into a tree.

Car Soon Takes Fire.

Miss De Freest jumped from the car just before it struck. She struck the street on her face and was badly scratched and bruised. The car immediately caught fire. Miss Clipperley tried to spring from the car, but her foot caught. Her clothing caught fire and was burned from her body.

Miss Seamon and Mrs. Wiegand stuck to the car until taken out. They were badly shaken up. Sherman, the guide, was standing up in the car when it struck. He was hurled to the bottom of the car and badly burned before he escaped. The chauffeur, Breed, was burned about the hands and face trying to shut off the supply of gasolene.

The injured were taken to the home of Mrs. Caroline Marshall. Dr. Thomas J. Partridge was called and attended to them. Mrs. Wiegand was sended and the fire department extinguished the fire in the machine.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Aug. 26.—With two victories stowed safely away in the ice chest, Manager Harry Smith's Doves went after the Cardinals again this afternoon with their minds made up to make a clean sweep of the series.

Such an occurrence would be baseball history for the season, as it is so long ago this happened that the details are hazy in the remembrance of the oldest old fogy.

The preliminary practice of both teams was in keeping with the weather, being the warmest for a long time and both teams acted as if they were after the game and went at top notch speed to get it. There were two reasons. The Doves wanted to make a cleanup, while Roger Bresnahan's crowd, sore at the two defeats, went out to take the last.

Both teams had all available slab artists at work and both Manager Harry Smith and Roger Bresnahan closely watched their work but neither would tell who was to work until the game started.

The AMERICAN has more circulation than all the other evening papers put together.

BENNETT PARK, Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26.—To-day was the crucial one, so far this season, in the struggle for Detroit, and the eyes of the entire world of fandom was centered here with good reason. The Tigers had been attacked in their hair by Connie Mack's White Elephants and twice had been defeated and the final game to-day proved so attractive that there was not standing room except baseball and nothing else done in the city except to attend the game or to await the result.

The Detroits with two victories proved especially pleasing to the local fans and just as displeasing to Connie Mack. It is pretty well conceded that Detroit can beat any team by close margins and that there was more than a bit of luck in the final results. The Athletics realized this and, as any one and started after the last game to-day with a determination to not only beat the Tigers, but to get loose from their hoodoo and shake the slump in which they are now playing. Both teams were on edge in the preliminary practice and while they were doing their stunts managers and captains had their eyes on the practice work of the pitchers and had every one working his best and until the game was called it was not even hinted who would work.

WIRELESS IS USED IN CHASE ON SEA FOR JAIL FUGITIVE

peared in Salem four Summers ago. He worked as telegraph operator at Vickey's brokerage office, Washington street, Salem, for a few weeks that Summer. Then he quit work and lived at ease on money he said was supplied him by his wealthy parents in Nova Scotia. He also alluded to an uncle who ran a garage in Beverly. But he never produced the uncle.

He is not known at the Salem or Beverly post office or banks, which would ordinarily be the case of a youth getting remittances from home. During the first Summer he said he had lodgings in Beverly.

The next Summer he moved in new lodgings in Lothrop street, Beverly, a good class neighborhood. He said that during the Winter he had "been away."

Asks for a Job.

He appeared early in the second Summer at the plant of the United Shoe Machinery Company in Beverly and asked for a job as inspector of concrete on the new construction work, saying he had taken a special course in engineering at the Maine State College. Failing to get the job, he stayed around for a month watching the progress of the work.

Early in the Summer of 1907 he reappeared in Beverly. He said he lived in Boston. He came to Salem daily and Sunday. He would arrive on the morning train from Boston, eat breakfast at a Mansion restaurant, and then idle the hours for the day. He would hang around Clement's or Merrill's boat landings, go to the Willows or Smith's Ferry and disappear in the evening. If he had a party of friends out for the afternoon he invariably would leave them at early evening, saying he had to go back to Boston.

The odd part of was that no one seems to recall seeing him actually going back to Boston at night. But the only time his wife seen at the Willows in the evening was at an occasional Sunday evening band concert.

He spent money freely. He entertained friends at dinners. He was a good shot, a crack yachtsman and an expert rifle shot. One of the Willows men had a Winchester rifle. Brahm would stick up an empty can fifty yards away and pump bullets through it by the score. Charles Woodman of Beverly had his sloop at the Willows that Summer and Brahm would sail it for him occasionally, being generally popular with the boat owners and watermen.

In Salem Last May.

He observed about the same program for the Summer of 1908, having been "away for the Winter," as usual.

Last May he turned up in Salem again more of a spender than ever. In his breakfast visits to Masury's restaurant he renewed acquaintance with Edward Colson of Dearborn street, Salem, son of a well-to-do family and clerk in the Salem Savings Bank. Colson is a member of the Jubilee Yacht Club of Beverly, of which President Taft is an honorary member.

When Brahm remarked that he wished to buy a boat Colson took him to Captain Tom Gillis of the Jubilee Yacht Club who had the yacht Savage for sale for $250.

Brahm paid the $250 cash without question, peeling off the rolls from a big wad of bills. He ran the Savage over to Moulton's boat landing and made arrangements with Moulton for landing and other privileges. He spent money to have the Savage's sail cut down and a bigger mast put in for a yawl rig. In the newly-bite disvisage he had one of the classiest knockabouts in Salem waters.

A Lavish Entertainer.

At the opening of the Willows season Brahm was on hand all the time. He entertained lavishly. He took out parties in the Savage to Gloucester, to Mingo beach at Manchester and other resorts, buying dinners and keeping his men guests supplied with good cigars. He was a free spender, a drinking man but he would buy liberally for thirsty guests.

About this time he began to mingle with society at Juniper. He made a big hit with the girls and their parents. He was a most presentable chap, about thirty-two years old, of medium height, with black hair and eyes and fine teeth. He had engaging manners and an air of flattering deference that women liked.

He would call on the pretty girls at Juniper, sit out on the piazzas and indulge in small talk without end. He took the girls, fathers, mothers and all out on boating trips.

He organized the youths of the Juniper colony into a baseball club to play the married men. He pitched for the bachelors, and, in the first and only game the team played, he proved such a puzzler to the married men that the bachelors won handily. Then he told the married men they had "hard luck," and so on, and they said he was a good sport if he did beat them. He was more popular than ever and many matrimonially marriageable daughters began to speculate with earnestness on the apparently eligible Mr. Brahm.

Escape While You Wait.

A month ago Brahm began to be very chummy with Harry Wingate, who had been a shoe cordwainer in Salem. He roomed with Wingate, who had apparently quit work. During the last month Brahm and Wingate were constantly together, spending the daytimes at the Willows on Brahm's boat or at Juniper.

A few days ago Brahm invited Edward Colson of the Jubilee Yacht Club to go on a cruise in the Savage, starting last Tuesday afternoon. Agreeable to this engagement, Colson went to the Willows Tuesday. Failing to find Brahm, Colson proceeded to Salem.

All this time Brahm had been under strong surveillance for the afternoon before. About 3 o'clock Colson was back at Salem. Brahm was making his daring escape from the Boston City Prison.

Where Brahm Went.

From one source and another the following has been learned about Brahm's movements after he slipped away from the Boston police Tuesday night:

He went by train to Salem, procured a grip and suitcase at the room he and Wingate occupied at No. 72 Summer street and boarded a Willows trolley at Town House square. At the square he met Harry Wilson and said, "Ah, there, Clyde," Brahm waved his hand and jumped aboard the trolley. At the Willows he was seen by 9:30 o'clock by Fred Holland Wheeler buying canned goods at Downey's lunch room. As he left the lunch room he was joined by another youth, now thought to be Harry Wingate.

There is nothing to indicate all this time that Wingate had or yet has any knowledge of the charges made against Brahm by the police or about his arrest and escape from the Tombs.

The two walked to Moulton's boat landing, where the patrolman saw one of them go into the boathouse and come out with a grip. A little later Whelton noticed the Savage standing out down the harbor, so he readily inferred that Brahm and some friend were taking a night sail. Whelton knew nothing then of Brahm's escape, but he had the chance of his life to nab Brahm then and there.

Police Learn the News.

The next day the police learned that the Savage was gone, also Harry Wingate's red canoe, likewise Brahm and Wingate themselves. Later came the report of the Savage being seen in Boston Harbor, headed toward Nantasket.

Now the police have sent word up and down the coast for the apprehension of Brahm. Wireless is being used extensively in this coastwise pursuit. Land stations have sent the message, "Have you seen Brahm in the Savage?" out to sea and incoming vessels, equipped with wireless, have been flinging it back. Amateurs along shore have been picking up Brahm queries all day long.

Suffragettes Starve Themselves, Are Freed

LIVERPOOL—The starvation diet caused officials to-day to release from prison the Walton Jail four suffragettes who had been sentenced for window smashing at a special meeting. The women refused to eat food, declaring they would die for the causes. Physicians who examined them declared that their condition was serious.

Abruzzi Failed in Climb.

ROME—The Duke of Abruzzi did not succeed in making the ascent of Mount Godwin-Austen on his Himalayan expedition because of bad weather, according to the Giornale, in a report, upon his trip to-day. He reached an altitude of 1,900 feet before abandoning the attempt and lived in the Glacier district seventy days. His record climb was 2,400 feet.

The hot weather remained unbroken to-day. The temperature at noon in the shade in Boston was 90. Boston remains the hottest city in the United States to-day.

The slight relief promised by the Weather Bureau came early to-day when a little breeze sprang up and the mercury started off at 76, but soon began climbing back towards its Summer record mark of 93, made yesterday.

There may be light thunder showers during the night. The heat is expected to continue till Friday night, at least.

The previous forecast was that it would be slightly cooler to-day, but the thermometer started in almost 10 degrees better than yesterday, dropping to 74 by 6 o'clock, and got back to 84 before 10 o'clock.

In this spell Boston is the hottest city in country. The heat is general through the eastern districts, and is expected to continue for several days. Thunder showers will be the only relief, for there is no real rain in sight. The wind will moderate from southwest to south.

The West Indian hurricane is now showing itself along the Southern coast. The storm is not heavy and the sea is high with almost a dead calm and the force of the hurricane may be felt before night. Shipping has been warned.

POSSE HUNTS DEER ISLAND FOR FUGITIVE

Mayor Hibbard's visit to Deer Island as a result of the "mutton stew" rebellion, in which two prisoners escaped from the House of Correction, resulted to-day in renewed efforts to find the men. Armed posses to-day began a second complete search of the island in the belief that the two men are still in hiding on the reservation. The Boston police sent out a general alarm to-day for the capture of the two men.

The identity of the escaped prisoners became known to-day for the first time. The alarm sent out by the Boston police contains the following official names and descriptions of the men:

W. HOWARD, of No. 113 Second street, Everett, committed January 22, 1909, for three years, is twenty-two years of age, weighs 150 pounds, is 5 feet 4 inches in height, and of dark complexion. On his right arm he has a flame and the word "Mother" and on his left clasped hands are tattooed with a heart and the initials "W. H."

JOHN McGREGOR of Roxbury, committed June 1, 1909, for two years under a sentence for breaking and entering. Is twenty-nine years of age, weighs 140 pounds, is 5 feet 5 inches in height and light complexion. His left eye is gone and he has a glass one in its place.

The sending out of an alarm by the Boston police for suburban police stations gives contradiction to the Deer Island officials who declare that the men have not left the island. There is a general belief that the men took a boat and rowed across to Squantum Point Shirley, Winthrop, and escaped.

NINE DROWNED IN WRECK.

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands Aug. 26.—A Spanish brigantine was wrecked at Puerto Ventura to-day. The captain and eight men were drowned.

POLICE PUT ON TRAIL OF DISS DE BAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Inspector McCafferty to-day assigned detectives to investigate the doings of Ann O'Delia Diss De Bar, the notorious spiritualistic veiled lecturer, known in connection with the Luther B. Marsh fraud and the Theocratic Unity cult, and reported dead half a dozen times, who came to light yesterday under the name of Mme. A'Diva Vend-Ya, a savant of the occult sciences in the Manhattan Hotel.

According to Inspector McCafferty, no charges have been made against the institute, which is under the direction of Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, professedly for the purpose of teaching the "new spiritualism" outlined by the director after years of study of Oriental philosophy.

Mrs. Wilcox was not met by "proper faith and practices," as declared in the Book of Revelations, one may keep pagan cul existence in this world forever, ruled one of the 144,000 elected."

Mrs. French came to New York from California a few days ago. They say, she says, by the help of her friends, Augustus Heinze and William J. Robinson, knows as the organizer of the optimist club, she rented the house in East Thirty-third street for the occupation of her faith. Ann O'Delia Diss De Bar was engaged as savant to lectures to classes in esoterics. Madame Diss De Bar has been known by as many as a dozen names in Chicago, South Africa, England, New Orleans and other places where she gained notoriety. She declares that she is the daughter of Lola Montez, Count Landa and Lola Montez, but in reality is the daughter of Professor John C. Salomon of Washington and later of Kentucky. She is about 70 years old.

JOHN N. HINES BURIED.

The funeral of John Nelson Hines, for many years connected with the firm of Allen Brothers of 63 Corbitt, was held from his late home, No. 183 Campbell street, Roxbury, to-day. Mr. Hines was drowned near Plymouth.

DORCHESTER REPUBLICANS SNUB HIBBARD

Mayor Hibbard has not been invited to attend the annual outing of the Young Men's Republican Club of Dorchester, and from all that could be learned to-day at the club headquarters, No. 77 Hancock street, he will not be asked. His name is not on the invitation list and that has been closed. The outing will be held on September 2, at the Rockland House, Nantasket, and already 5,000 tickets have been put out.

The fact that Mr. Hibbard has not been asked to join the party is causing plenty of speculation. Many of the club does not intend to support Hibbard again in spite, Frederick J. Brand, chairman of The Board of Aldermen, is the club's choice for a Republican candidate for Mayor from Dorchester. Mr. Brand will be at the outing, for he is chairman of the reception committee.

In speaking of the leaving off of Hibbard's name Chairman Brand, the chairman of the press committee of the club and first vice-president of the Republican Ward and City Committee, said:

"Mayor Hibbard cannot be attached to the fact that Mr. Hibbard's name is not on the invitation list. The outing is not in the interests of any mayoralty candidate."

President Taft has been invited, also Senator Lodge. The Senator has accepted, and his remarks at the outing will be the first public speech he has made since the passage of the new tariff bill.

Other invited guests are: Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Mayor Hibbard, Congressman Gardner, Navy Meyer, Postmaster General Hitchcock, ex-Governor Curtis Guild, Congressman Weeks, Samuel L. Powers, ex-Mayor Curtis, Colonel Sidney P. Bigelow of North Attleboro, and District Attorney Stanley.

On the reception committee are W. Prescott Parker, and Alonzo B. Abbott, State Senators, and Representatives Charles A. Langley, Harry I. Haas, Luther G. Greenleaf, Herbert W. Kenney, a partner with Mr. Hibbard, William B. Willcut, John C. Barry and J. Mitchell Galvin.

CHAPLAIN IN NAVY HELD UP AND ROBBED

The Rev. George B. Clark, a chaplain in the navy, and at present lodging at No. 34 Mt. Vernon street, was the victim of a daring hold-up in Court street early to-day, when two men got away with his gold watch, valued at $100. Mr. Clark reported the matter at once to Sergeant Brooks at the Jay street police station, and an investigation was begun. Mr. Clark furnished good descriptions of both men.

When an AMERICAN reporter called at No. 34 Mt. Vernon street the landlady said Mr. Clark was asleep, and that he came in shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. The reporter was admitted to the room of Mr. Clark. Asked about the robbery, Mr. Clark spoke freely, but about himself he would say little, except that he is a chaplain in the navy, and also a D. D. Mr. Clark is a dignified looking man about fifty-five years old.

Attacked from Behind.

Asked about the robbery, he said: "It was too hot to sleep last night, so I took a walk out to get the air. I had left Bradley square and turned into Court street, which was deserted, when two men sprang upon me from behind. They must have come out of a doorway, for I heard no steps.

'One of the men caught my arms and pinned them behind me, and before I knew it the other had unbuttoned my watch from the vest pocket. The chain held, but the swivel broke. It all happened so quickly that I was too amazed to call for help. The men got away into the dark square. I went to the police station in Joy street and told the man in charge about it.

"The watch cost $100, but to me it is more valuable, for it is a family heirloom."

Describes the Robbers.

He gave this description of the robbers: One about twenty-two years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, light complexion, wore dark coat, cap and overalls. The other about twenty-five, 5 feet 8 inches tall, dark complexion, smooth face, wore dark suit and a cap.

At the local navy yard it was said that there was no chaplain there by the name of Clark, and none of the officials seemed to know him. The army and navy register gives the name of one chaplain by the name surname, the Rev. Henry H. Clark, retired, of the naval academy at Annapolis.

WIFE IS DEAD; HUSBAND HELD

LAWRENCE, Aug. 26.—Following an autopsy upon the body of Mrs. Margaret Johnson, who died mysteriously at the College Hospital Wednesday, Fred Johnson, the woman's husband, was to-day arrested by Inspector Thompson on the technical charge of assault, but the police court complaint, when Johnson is arraigned before Judge Mahoney to-morrow, may be changed.

The woman was found unconscious at her home on Hampshire street, Monday night, and died without regaining her senses. Today's autopsy was conducted by Medical Examiner George W. Dow and Dr. Bernard J. Muhlenhaul, who declared that there was no brain, due, in the opinion of the doctors, to a previous fall of heavy character.

Johnson declares that he cannot account for the unconscious condition in which he found his wife. The couple had been married but two years. Johnson was a widower with six children.

APPLE CROP TO BE SHORT AND POOR

The report from Middleboro that the apple crop this year will be about the average was discredited by the Board of Agriculture to-day. Reports from the board's correspondents in the state do not bear out this assertion. The forthcoming bulletin of the board on the subject will say: Apples will be an even lighter crop than was anticipated, and in many cases the drought so affected the trees that the apples will be undersized.

NEW HITCH ON PLASTERERS' STRIKE

The plasterers' strike remains unsettled. Following the meeting to-day in the Quincy House it was said that while no formal settlement of the strike has been effected the "waiting-for-peace committee" still had hopes of final success, and that another meeting would be held next Monday morning.

IRISH LEAGUE HEADS MEET TO-MORROW

A reception will be rendered both of them at the Hoffman House Friday evening.

CHARGES AGAINST WAKEFIELD OFFICER

Singer, 14 Highland avenue, father of the youth.

When the case was tried in Malden the officer was severely scored by Judge Bruce.

A Bit of History and What It Signifies

JUST EIGHT YEARS AGO these sales were started. At first they took the form of Hour Sales, a separate and distinct sale being held every hour from 9 to 12 and from 2 to 5. That system proved unsatisfactory because a single hour was too short a period. People who had come some distance and missed a sale by two or three minutes were naturally dissatisfied. After trial of a few months the original plan was abandoned and the Three-Hour Sales were substituted as being better adapted to the convenience of purchasers, particularly those living out of town.

The Three-Hour plan proved a success from the start and, from that day to this, these sales have been held with the regularity of the recurrence of Friday itself. Any well-informed advertiser will tell you that the Houghton & Dutton Three-Hour Sales are now known from here to California, and the fact that they have been copied in nearly every city of any considerable size in the country shows plainly how their success is regarded by the trade at large.

Of course, when the sales were started, we never dreamed of the success which they were destined to attain. We then hoped to be able to maintain them successfully for a few months at best, and now they have run for eight years with a constantly increasing trade. Advertisers say that, as a series of sales, they have beaten all records; that no other series of special sales in this country ever ran so long, with so pronounced a success.

From the beginning, except for the necessity of frequent enlargement, the Three-Hour advertising bulletin has appeared in precisely the same form. Not a single display line or cut has ever been admitted to the body of the ad., because we want the drawing power of every item to depend wholly on the value which it represents. To what, then, shall we attribute the matchless success of the Friday Sales? One simple word expresses it: PRICE! We have adhered consistently to our purpose to sell goods for six hours on Friday at materially reduced prices, and this fact has become unmistakable to the general public.

The Three-Hour Sales have changed Friday from the poorest trade day of the week to one of the best, and not infrequently it brings our best trade of the entire week. Inspired by the success of these sales, other retail houses, here and elsewhere, have become large Friday advertisers, so that now Friday has everywhere become a rival of Monday as a bargain day.

Wishing our competitors all success in the Friday field, we desire to return our sincere thanks to a purchasing public whose appreciative response has maintained these sales so long and made for them a record so brilliant.

In honor of the anniversary we have enlarged our bulletin this week and crowded every inch of space with golden values:

ACCUSED POLICEMAN CLEARED; THEN IS PROMOTED BY O'MEARA

Head of Department Defies His Critics and Exonerates Bluecoat on Assault Charge.

The BOSTON AMERICAN prints to-day the general order issued by Police Commissioner O'Meara, giving the finding in the case of Reserve Patrolman John R. Fitzgerald of Hanover street station, who was the subject of charges of assault preferred by Louis Miller, proprietor of an ice-cream factory in Commercial street.

Patrolman Fitzgerald is exonerated from the charges. In commenting on the case Commissioner O'Meara calls attention to the expense incident to such a hearing and investigation. He adds that such expenditure cannot be undertaken when in his opinion the charges appear to be frivolous, malicious or incapable of proof.

Coincident with the exoneration of Reserve Patrolman Fitzgerald is his promotion to the position of regular patrolman at Hanover Street Station. His promotion is one of seventy-three created in a general order just issued by the Commissioner to increase the ranks of the regular force.

The Fitzgerald hearing lasted two days before a board consisting of Police Captains Gaskin, Hall and Brickley. In commenting on the finding of the board Commissioner O'Meara says:

General Order No. 314.

A trial board consisting of Captains Gaskin, Forrest F. Hall and Brickley has this day heard by reference a complaint against Reserveman John R. Fitzgerald of Division 1, has reported its finding to the Commissioner.

The complaint was made by one of two owners of an ice cream factory in Commercial street, who charged the officer with assault. He had already applied to the Municipal court for a warrant for the officer's arrest on the same charge and had been refused.

The complaint charged that when he entered his factory late in the night of Sunday, August 8th, he found in it Reserveman Fitzgerald, two men and two women, together with his partner and his workmen; that the women were dancing in an indecent manner and making improper advances to the workmen; that he requested them politely to go out, which he deemed and one of the men did; that thereupon Fitzgerald called him a vile name, declared that the women were friends of his and had been brought in by him, and seizing the complainant by the throat, choked him, threw him down repeatedly, jumped on him, ordered his waiter to hit forehead, drew a club across his face and threatened to kill him.

Pies For Forgiveness.

He charged further, that soon after Fitzgerald had left he returned, and through an open window, uttered a command of threats and expressions to the in the morning while complainant was still in bed, Fitzgerald called at his home, begged forgiveness, and called off his action he taken against him.

Reserveman Fitzgerald testified that at the time in question he saw two men and two women who were unknown to him enter the premises through a rear yard, and suspecting that they might be there for no good purpose presently followed; that he found them in the back entry and on asking for the workrooms, and that when he asked them what they were doing they answered that they had only come for ice cream; that in order to test their truthfulness he told them that the place was open; that they went into the room, and he soon after following found that the complainant's partner had sold ice cream to them, and that there was no improper conduct on the part of any of them; that the complainant suddenly appeared, angry and excited, and with obscene language and vile epithets ordered the men and women out of the place; that he warned the complainant not to use such language, whereupon the complainant addressed him in a similar manner and pushed at him in passing out; that he put his hand before him to meet the rush, and the complainant, striking against it, slipped on the floor, which both sides agreed was covered to a depth of an inch with soft and melting ice, fell upon some cans and thus received such scratches on his face as he afterward showed.

The officer denied specifically that he struck the complainant, took hold of him or drew either club or revolver; denied the conversation alleged to have taken place afterwards through an open window; and denied that he had ever gone to the complainant's house or that he even knew where it was.

Evidence of Witnesses.

The story of the complainant was supported by his partner and two of his workmen, though their testimony on many points was at variance. All four agreed that there was a long and desperate fight between the complainant, who testified that he weighed 150 pounds and the officer, who is a powerful young man, five feet ten inches and 175 pounds, the latter lost in their estimates of the length of the struggle from one to five minutes.

The complainant testified that it lasted about ten minutes, his partner said half an hour, one of the workmen fifteen minutes, and the other was sure it was an hour. The testimony of the witnesses was taken through an interpreter, but the questions were clearly asked and repeated and the complainant, who was present and knew their language, could have detected any misinterpretation.

The complainant's partner testified that Fitzgerald came to the factory the morning after the affair at half-past seven, and as it was important to fix the exact time, these questions were asked and answered in the cross-examination

Q.—You say that, Monday morning, the first time he came to your place it was about half-past seven? A.—Yes.

Q.—How do you fix the time at half-past seven? A.—I always come from Dorchester and when I get off the train I looked at the time, because it is right in front of the clock, and got there from the train, and it took me probably three minutes to walk over.

Q.—And the clock at the time said half-past seven? A.—Yes.

Later in the cross-examination the same witness gave such an account of his doings through the night and the early morning that those questions and answers followed:

Q.—Didn't you say on direct examination that you went home, and coming home in the night was the first time after o'clock? Answer that yes or no. A.—I did not say that.

Q.—Then, as a matter of fact, you did not go home that night? A.—No, sir.

When recalled the next day this witness was asked whether it was between 5 and 6 when Fitzgerald called.

Reserveman Fitzgerald's testimony was supported by the two women and two men and by another man who testified that he formed part of the party. Their testimony as to pushing the officer, from the street to the yard was developed that the officer and women were sisters-in-law of one of the men, that they lived at his house close by and had been invited by him to go for the ice cream, and that one of them was but fifteen years old and had come to Boston from Nova Scotia only a few months before.

A peculiar feature of the hearing was the disagreement on the simple point as to the time the affair happened. The complainant and his partner and his workmen insisted that it was 12 o'clock or later when the party and removal of the ice cream took place. The officers and five others were positive that it was a little after 12, and gave specific reasons for their belief.

The dispute taken in connection with a remark which the outside witnesses declared Fitzgerald made to the complainant, perhaps furnish a key to the whole affair. Reserveman Fitzgerald testified that when the complainant called him by name he added: "You have been spotting around here for two months trying to see what you can get on me and you can't get anything on me, or any of your tribe." It was the work had been going on and the ice cream had been sold after midnight, both would have been lawful, but an hour earlier they would constitute a double breach of the Sunday law; and the discovery of the officers presence by the complainant under such conditions might have accounted for his anger and excitement.

Comments About Miller.

Under examination as to his record the complainant acknowledged that a couple of ten years ago he served a sentence of eighteen months in the House of Correction for attempted arson. That he also he was fined in Boston for throwing rubbish into the street, and in the Dedham court for an assault committed in Revere; that in June, 1909, in Board of Health warned him against keeping horses on his premises, afterward obtained an injunction against him which he refused to obey, and for his refusal brought him into court where he was fined, and that two or three weeks ago he was fined $25 for assaulting a sheriff's officer who had gone to his place to take out the machinery.

The finding of the Trial Board is that the defendant is not guilty of assault as charged. The finding is approved, and it is hereby ordered that the complaint against Reserveman Fitzgerald of Division 1 be dismissed.

The hearing of this case required the attendance at headquarters of four police captains for two days, three attorneys, both sides being represented, a stenographer, six interpreters and eighteen witnesses—testimony occupied eight hours in reading, and when reported covered 140 written sheets, which the Commissioner was under obligations to read through, and as many parts to read more than once.

This expenditure of time and money was justified by the seriousness of the charge, but such expenditure cannot be undertaken if it be not undertaken when a preliminary investigation shows that a charge is frivolous, malicious, or incapable of proof, or is based on a complainant's lack of knowledge of the duties of a police officer and the legal limitations of his authority.

Fitzgerald is now altogether the case already disposed of in this general order, it is appropriate to say that the charges and the falsehood contained in many of the charges made against policemen, and the ingenuity and boldness with which such charges are supported with perjured testimony are almost incredible.

Scores of such cases have been uncovered in the past three years, and in every case through investigations directed by the Commissioner and not by the accusers, the charges are worthless and a cordial welcome to the investigation continues for their breakdowned and even anonymous slanders.

MISS ETHEL HILL, WHO LEAVES STAGE TO MARRY MANAGER

'ROAD HOG' MAY COST MAN'S LIFE

WESTERLY, R. I., Aug. 26.—A stubborn farmer, who "allowed" he would stick out for his rights no matter what happened, caused an accident near Mattuck on the Narragansett Pier road which is likely to result in a death. An automobile owned by Dr. Robert Mulligan of Pittsburg, in which were he and Mrs. Mulligan and Mrs. Mulligan's father, W. H. Singer, turned turtle when the farmer in his wagon drove them into a ditch.

All were thrown out. Mr. Singer receiving a scalp wound and a shock, which, with his eighty years, may result in death. The identity of the farmer whose wagon was responsible for the mishap has not been learned.

SAILOR WILLIAMS AGAIN ARRESTED

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 26.—Dave Williams, a negro mess attendant from the battleship Vermont, recently acquitted of manslaughter by causing the death of another negro attendant in a boxing contest on board ship, was placed in jail here on the charge of assault with intent to kill on Howard Northcutt, a young white man of this city, about two years ago.

Williams was brought back in his naval uniform and was identified by Northcutt.

TWO-YEAR-OLD GIRL KILLS LITTLE SISTER

PLAINS, Pa., Aug. 26.—Anna May Evans, two-year-old daughter of Thomas Evans, while playing at home nurse for her three-months-old baby sister, innocently killed her by giving her laudanum. She told the distracted mother that she had given the baby medicine to put her to sleep.

WED MANAGER AFTER SHORT STAGE CAREER

BROCKTON, Aug. 26.—After less than a year on the vaudeville stage, Miss Ethel Blanche Hill, of Avon, Thursday, will retire next month as the wife of John J. O'Neill, until recently manager of a vaudeville theatre at Halifax, N. S. Their marriage, which will take place on September 4 at the Church of the Sacred Heart, will be the culmination of a love-at-first-sight romance.

A feature of the romance is Miss Hill's unswerving patriotism, and the willingness of her affianced to give up his native land for the love of a girl. Before their marriage Miss Hill told him that she felt honored, but that she couldn't think of living anywhere but in the United States. O'Neill unhesitatingly said that if she felt that way about it the United States would be his future home. He resigned his Halifax management and came to live at Brockton. He is now employed as a clerk in the Union Boot Shop here.

Miss Hill, whose stage name was Ernaline Lovrel, is the daughter of a Swedish actress whose maiden name was Sophie Stone. She made her first professional appearance in Brockton last January, giving an impersonation of "Captain Willie Brown." It was this act that captivated the Halifax manager.

Miss Hill comes of a family of singers, all her forbears for generations having been vocally gifted. When she was a child of seven old she took part in a parlor entertainment in the Swedish Methodist Church of the Caswell drew away from the Battery landing. On board the Caswell were about fifty persons, the majority of them women, bound for the Statue of Liberty.

The steamer Albertina was making the landing and suddenly swerved. Her bow plowed full forward from bow to midships, on the starboard side.

The side of the little vessel was stove in; she keeled over and sank in deep water. Almost on her starboard beam, the supports of her upper deck were torn away, and for an instant it seemed that she would go under. The passengers were thrown from their seats, screaming about the deck and were quieted with difficulty.

Immediately, she was out ya few yards from the pier, and none of the damage had gone below her water line.

LAX MARRIAGE LAWS SCORED BY JUDGE

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 26.—"I have no quarrel with Cardinal Gibbons on the divorce question," said Henry B. Brown, former associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. The Cardinal and I differ on just one point. He regards divorce as a sin. I cannot accept for my own such a radical stand. I am considered that there should be a uniformity in procedure throughout the country. Much of the present divorce evil rises from lax marriage laws."

PUP HOLDS UP CLAIMANT TO TAFT KINSHIP

BEVERLY, Aug. 26.—Nehemiah S. Heron, the venerable truant officer of this city, who claims to be a relative of Mrs. Taft, went to the executive offices to-day to establish that claim, but was intercepted by Yacob, the bull pup, belonging to Pete Peterson, the janitor of the building.

Yacob bit Nehemiah in the right ankle, clear through his red socks and Nehemiah was so generally disgusted at the harsh welcome to a kindred that he gave up his errand.

Nehemiah is seventy-one years old and has been truant officer of Beverly for forty years. He has a chart which, he declares, shows indubitably that he and Mrs. Taft are cousins.

Armed with this chart as came to the executive office building on Mason street to-day to see Secretary Carpenter and demand an interview with Mrs. Taft.

As he was coming up the stairway Yacob, the bull-pup, meandered around the corner at the top of the flight. Yacob caught one glimpse of Nehemiah's red socks and sank his teeth in the right ankle of the claimant.

The next second a mixture of Jacob, Nehemiah, red socks, genealogical chart and Nehemiah, and growls rolled down the stairway over the sidewalk and into a patch of grass, where the waves first died away.

Nehemiah picked up his dilapidated chart, limped to a doctor's office and had his ankle cauterized. Bitterly he commented on the reception he got.

HARRIMAN'S DOCTOR SAYS: HE'S BETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—An official statement of the condition of E. H. Harriman was given to the American aNews Service today by Dr. William G. Lyle, Mr. Harriman's personal physician, who is with Mr. Harriman at Arden, the financier's country home on the top of the Ramapo Mountains. He said:

"The stories that Mr. Harriman is suffering from a nervous, cancerous complaint are grossly untrue.

"Mr. Harriman is suffering from overwork and nervous breakdown. He is getting better every hour that he is here.

"He slept well last night and arose early this morning. He ate a hearty breakfast of fruit, cereal, eggs and toast.

TRAIN PLOWS INTO STRUGGLING CROWD OF EXCURSIONISTS

renty feet between this and the gateway as packed and the crowd extended out the sides.

The rear car hit the buffer, tore it down, ent through the high iron fence that shuts f the trackway and hurtled into the mass f people herded into this small space. here was a crash of breaking wood and on that could be heard outside of the g station.

In the rush to escape scores were knocked own and trampled upon. The people, rowded between the gateway and the to- acco booth, fought their way back upon he outer circle of the crowd and those ushed for safety into other throngs hurry- ng to catch trains.

In a moment all was confusion and ex- itement. Station officials sent in emer- ency calls for police and ambulances.

In the meantime, those who had escaped rere dragging injured and fainting women nd children to places of safety.

Hundreds of people from the street had rushed into the station and added to the confusion and excitement.

It was reported that several had been illed.

Hurry Call for Ambulances.

The station restaurant and waiting rooms rere turned into temporary hospitals. More han thirty women who had fainted were urried into these rooms, where it was ne- essary to render medical attendance for the ost of them.

Bruised and bleeding victims, with hers who had been crushed in the acci- ent or in the panic that followed, stag- ered away unaided or were helped by hers who had escaped. Ambulances sum- moned from the nearer police stations and ospitals carried away several.

The station officials, after the first hur- ied investigation, announced that three ersons had been injured sufficiently to be aken to hospitals, and that reports had een made to them of fifteen others who ad required medical attention.

The two rear cars of the train left the rack and the last car shot across the mid- way until it ran into the tobacco booth.

Witness Tells of Accident.

One of the best descriptions of the con- sion which followed the accident was ' by thirteen-year-old Beatrice Lindsay gan, who said:

"I came on from Lynn with papa and mma to go to Newport on the 9:30 ex- ress train.

"We were standing with a crowd of ther people massed around the gate of Track 16, waiting for the excursion train to back in. There were a few people in- side the gate. They had got around there by going through gates farther along each way. But the most of us were packed just outside the gate.

"The first thing I knew there was a crash. The train, backing in track six- teen, had come too fast. It knocked over the bumper. The end car pushed up over the narrow strip of platform between the bumper and the fence. It broke through the fence right where the sign was telling about the train. The end of the car struck eight or ten feet into the main place where we were standing.

"Everyone for Himself."

"There was a fearful scramble to get out of the way of the train. People jumped one way and another. A man in some kind of a uniform fell against mamma and me. We were knocked down and someone stepped on me. I wasn't hurt much, but my glasses fell off and were broken. Mamma wasn't hurt much either. Papa managed to get hold of us and lift us up and get us out of the crowd. It was awful for a few min- utes. Women fell down in trying to get out of the crowd. It was awful for a few minutes. Women fell down in trying to get out of the way. People bumped into one another.

"It was everyone for himself for a few minutes. I saw women pushed down or fall down. I saw an ambulance come and somebody taken away in it. Some people were hurt pretty bad.

"We are not going to Newport to-day. We have had all the Newport excursion we want just now. Papa says we are going home."

Marvels at Escape.

Mrs. M. J. Quinan of No. 20 London street, East Boston, who barely escaped being knocked down by the bunting post when the train plunged out into the mid- way, said:

"I was standing with three friends in the big crowd of people who were wait- ing to board the Newport special. We were almost at the gateway of track 16. I saw the train backing in and realized that it was backing too fast. I shouted 'Look out' to my friends. Then the crowd surged around us and we were knocked to the floor. My hat was torn off and I lost my handbag, containing my pocketbook.

"Everyone shrieked and seemed to have lost their heads. I cried out, but was pushed back on the floor by the big crowd who were trying to get out of the path of the car. That's all I remember until I found myself here in the waiting room.

"There was such a jam in front of the entrance of the station that I think it is a won- der that no one was killed."

Official Statement.

At the New York, New Haven & Hart- ford office in the South Station this state- ment was made:

"The cause of the accident is under in- vestigation. We are undecided whether it was due to negligence on the part of a trainman or a defective air brake. We know that three persons were injured so as to go to a hospital and that fifteen others were thrown down or falsely or were so frightened as to require assist- ance. Lost articles have been reported and some have been turned in that were found. The injury to the car is yet to be determined. One step off and the end, of course, there was damage done to the truck and gearing."

The wreckage was cleared away at 10:30 o'clock and the other South Station trains were not delayed.

GEN. JEFFRIES KILLS EDITOR FOR ATTACK

PANAMA, Aug. 26.—Brutally kicking him and crushing his skull with a re- volver, General Herbert O. Jeffries, who figured prominently in the bloodless rev- olutions which freed Panama from Colom- bia, killed William Nichols Chandler, editor of the Panama Press.

The cause of the fracas that resulted in Chandler's death was an article sup- posed to reflect on Mrs. Claude E. Guyant, wife of the United States Deputy Consul General here, with whom Jeffries eloped in June, and sister-in-law of Jeffries.

Jeffries stalked into the office of the Press and demanded that he be allowed to see Chandler. The newspaper man al- lowed him to be admitted. In trying to get out of the way. People bumped into one another.

"What the h— does this mean," he shouted at Chandler, pointing to arti- cle in the paper he carried. Over the top of the article he had written Chandler's name.

"It means exactly what it says," re- plied Chandler, just as warmly.

With an oath Jeffries jumped at Chandler and the two men grappled. They plunged about the room a minute and then broke away, Jeffries forcing Chandler away from him. The revolutionist then drew a re- volver, and when the newspaper man saw the weapon he made a leap for his ad- versary. Jeffries stepped back and struck Chandler on the head with the butt of the revolver.

As Chandler fell Jeffries, still infuriated, kicked him repeatedly, while some of the members of the office staff stood by afraid to interfere.

As soon as it was learned that Chandler was dead Jeffries was locked up.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

TWENTY MEN SEEK WAKEFIELD JOB

WAKEFIELD, Aug. 26.—The Select- men, who appoint a successor to-night to Harvey G. Brockbank, the missing Chief of Police have received more than twenty applications for the place, many of them from out of town. Among the local men who have either openly announced them- selves as candidates for the place or who are being mentioned by their friends are: Former Police Chief Harvey C. Coffin, Special Officer Henry de Rocke, Special Officer Eugene McDonnell, Patrick Butler, Patrick Maloney, Albert D. Cate, Edward S. Jacobs, Thomas A. Douglass, P. J. Kelly and Charles E. Bullard. Mr. Bullard, who is a retired member of the Boston police force, having served on the latter department for twenty-five years, is said to be a likely candidate for the place.

BIG FAIR OPENS AT MARSHFIELD

All roads lead to Marshfield to-day, the attraction being the annual fair of which Thomas W. Lawson, as president of the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society, recently wrote so entertainingly and at such length to President Taft.

In the language of Mr. Lawson, it will be "one of the modern fifteries with which the prosperous agricultural societies tin- sculate their annual fairs."

Still in the language of Mr. Lawson, it does offer, however, "a peep at those fine pumpkins and cabbages that have never missed causing the mouths of red-blooded Americans to water," and "a good, old- fashioned restful day."

You see the AMERICAN everywhere— in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

14 MORE TICKETS FOR WONDERLAND

It may interest the thousands of moun- bers of the SUNDAY AMERICAN Outing Club that last Tuesday was the banner day of the year and one of the biggest in the two seasons at Wonderland Park. Not the great gate and the several shows received thousands of the SUNDAY AMERICAN free tickets. The great Underwood & Under- much to do with the big attendance this year. Next Sunday's BOSTON AMERI- CAN will print fourteen more free tickets, one for admission and one for the vaude- ville show free, and the other twelve giving ten cents worth of amusement for five cents and a coupon.

BIG COAL CARGOES COME TO BOSTON

An enormous amount of coal has reached this port from the Chesapeake, no less than eight big schooners making the har- bor on one afternoon and night in addi- tion, a dozen heavily laden barges ar- rived in tow. The aggregate shipments brought in were nearly 40,00 tons. One of the schooners, the Sylvia H. Kaplan, af- ter taking eleven days for the run up the coast, made almost record time in com- ing across the bay, and the wind was southwest at that. She rounded the Cape at 10:30 and at 5:30 she was reported as passing Boston Light.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN is the Seventh Day Wonder of New England.

LEXINGTON PARK MECCA TO-MORROW

To-morrow the balance of this week's Lexington Park free tickets will be good for admission at the gate. Next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will publish another four now in the following days. # BROWN AFTER THAT $9,000

LOWELL, Aug. 26.—Mayor George H. Brown made another attempt to-day to ob- tain possession of the $9,000 which he was ordered, in a verdict against the Lowell Belting Co., to refund.

Atty. Bird filed a petition with Charles Cowley, master in chancery, to have the settlements which have been placed in escrow by the money dismissed.

The Mayor asks that three bondsmen be has selected—David Dickson, Henry F. O'Dowd and Edward Cauley—be given the money pending a decision on the case by Judge John W. McCrory, Frank E. Rollins and D. J. Murphy, who have attached the money pending payment of their claims for attorneys' fees and for stenographic work done for the Mayor during the recent hearings against the police board. The master in chancery will give a hearing on Saturday on the Mayor's petition.

STORAGE BARN FIRE — ALARMS ROXBURY

Excitement and alarm spread through Gould street, West Roxbury, early to-day, when a wooden barn used as a storage warehouse by George Abbott was burned. It was feared that the fire would spread to the dwelling house near the barn. An automobile, seventeen power sewing ma- chines and considerable other property were destroyed. The loss was about $3,000.

BRYAN TO RUN ON DRY TICKET

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The latest political story of interest to Washing- ton, comes from Texas, and has caused much comment among District of Columbia Democrats.

It is that the prohibitionists, now mak- ing such strides in the Southern States, may nominate William Jennings Bryan for President in 1912 on the prohibition party. It is said, will hold its national convention first, thus giving them an advantage in the matter of fusion with the Democrats.

Mr. Bryan has recently allowed it to be understood by his friends that he is friendly to prohibition, and indicated his belief that the question would be a lead- ing issue in the next presidential cam- paign. The Bryan Democrats here, who insist that the "Peerless One" again will be the party asset with every degree of positiveness that the advocates of pro- hibition in the South include the best and most influential men in the Democratic party.

They call attention to the fact that Texas, the banner Democratic State in the South, is on the verge of a political revolu- tion and on the bursting forth of the "Drys" and the "Wets" is so intense that it is not impossible the Democratic party will split in twain.

The prohibition wave now appearing over the country seems to gain rather than lessen. The best proof that it will have to be reckoned with by political parties is the falling off in the internal revenue receipts of the government.

SOCIETY AIDS HOSPITAL FUND WITH CONCERT

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

ONE of the affairs to which society will gather in large numbers to-morrow is the much talked of concert to be given at the Summer home in Swampscott of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter of Marlboro street. It is expected that it will be an outdoor affair. The concert is in aid of the Newfoundland Hospital, in which both Dr. Wilfred Grenfell of Labrador, and Dr. John Mason Little of this city are greatly interested.

The long list of society patronesses includes Mrs. Walter C. Baylies, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, Mrs. Arthur Little, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Mrs. James H. Beal, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. William C. Endicott, Jr., Mrs. Arthur F. Estabrook, Mrs. Joan C. Gray, Mrs. Otis Kimball, Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. J. M. Little, Mrs. Julius Sewall, Mrs. John Shepard, Mrs. W. F. Whitney, Mrs. R. J. To-morrow evening is the date set for the fancy dress ball at Sunset Point farm, the Newport home of the Reginald C. Vanderbilts, which is being looked forward to with much keen anticipation. The affair is to include a dinner and cotillion and the younger element of the Summer colony will be well represented.

Another fashionable gathering to-morrow, in which many Boston society leaders are taking much interest, is the second of the subscription series of German readings, which Frederic Waters is giving in aid of the North Shore homes this season. Mrs. Eben D. Jordan opens her home at West Manchester for the reading to-morrow.

Yesterday at Bar Harbor was a day of recitals. George Kiernan gave a clever impersonation of "The Rivals," using the reading version which Joseph Jefferson used. In the list of distinguished patronesses were Mrs. George A. Draper, Mrs. Frank H. Goodyear, Mrs. William F. Cochrane, Mrs. William P. Draper, Mrs. Henry Pimock, Mrs. William C. Allison, Mrs. Morgan G. Bartwell, Mrs. D. C. Blair, Mrs. Archibald Barklie, Mrs. George E. Dodge, Mrs. Henry Lane, Mrs. W. H. Force, Lady Gaff, Mrs. Frank T. Howard, Mrs. Thomas H. Hubbard, Mrs. John S. Kennedy, Mrs. F. S. Walcott, Mrs. Buchanan Winthrop and Mrs. Gardiner Sherman.

James Parker of Boston is visiting his uncle, James Y. Parker, at Newport.

A wedding of some interest here took place yesterday afternoon at The Orchard, Ft. when Miss Elizabeth Kilbourne Young, daughter of Alden M. Young of New York, became the bride of the Rev. Herbert Draper Gallaudet of Boston. Mr. Gallaudet is the associate pastor of the Old South Congregation Church, Boston, and has been here since 1907. The ceremony was performed at the Anchorage, the villa of the bride's parents, where they have passed their Summers for the last twenty years.

Mr. Gallaudet is a Yale man of the class of 1898. The bride's veil was of Brussels lace, which had been worn by her sister, Mrs. John Goss and Mrs. Milton K. Warner at their weddings. The bride was given in marriage by her father in the presence of about 200 guests. The Boston guests included the Rev. and Mrs. John Hopkins Denison, Dr. and Mrs. Joel Goldthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. Phillis Saltonstall, Mrs. Charles Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. William Clawson of Magnolia and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuft of Milton.

Another dramatic recital was given at Bar Harbor yesterday by Miss Ann Grant of New York City. Miss Grant's subject was Strauss's new opera, "Elektra."

'I HAVE NOTHING TO FEAR,' SAYS ADMIRAL EATON IN POISON CASE

Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton declared to-day that he has nothing to fear from the report of Professor William F. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School, who is making an analysis of the contents of the stomach of the Admiral's adopted infant son, Mrs. Eaton, the Admiral's wife, stands by her charge that the boy was murdered by poison.

The report of Dr. Whitney is expected to-morrow. Mrs. Eaton is with her daughter at her cottage, Scituate. Admiral Eaton is at his farm at Assiuipi, near Hanover.

"I have nothing to fear," said Admiral Eaton. "The whole affair is most pitiful. There is innocence in my heart. I am sure that the report of the chemists and autopsy will prove those charges that someone poisoned my child to be the vaporings of an excited and hysterical mind. That is what they are.

Silent on Adoption.

"Ask my friends, my neighbors here, my neighbors in Brookline—they will tell you the kind of man I am. I realize that the public has a right to be interested in these charges that our son was poisoned. That is why I talk to you. Of my private affairs, I say nothing."

The Admiral refused to deny or say anything of the discovery of the Probate Court papers to-day which show that the infant was adopted by him and Mrs. Eaton in the Probate Court, Boston, when the boy was two months old.

* * *

The child was born on February 1, 1909, and on March 22 following, the Admiral and his wife appeared before the Probate Court and asked for permission to adopt the boy. Judge George gave this permission on April 22, and the child's name was legally changed to Joseph Giles Eaton, Jr., after the Admiral.

Awaits Poison Report.

The report of Professor Whitney of Harvard on his examination of the stomach of the baby, which Mrs. Eaton believes will substantiate her charge that the baby was poisoned is anxiously awaited. In the Summer colony awaits the report with the greatest interest on account of the prominence of the Eaton family and the sensational charges of Mrs. Eaton that the baby's death followed attempts to poison her and her daughter, June Ainsworth.

One of the greatest surprises in the investigation of the Eaton baby's death is the discovery that the baby was only the adopted son of the Rear Admiral. The adoption was unknown to friends of the Eatons and their acquaintances in the Summer colony here until the discovery of the adoption papers in the Suffolk county court. Admiral Eaton admitted that the child was not his, but said the baby was as dear to him as one of his own children.

Kept Adoption Secret.

The adoption of the infant was accomplished with the greatest secrecy. The baby was at the time but two months old and it is said that its parents were unknown to the Eatons. The Admiral spoke of the baby as "my son," and talked of his plans to train the child for the navy. The Admiral has aged noticeably since the death of the infant. "If the boy was poisoned—if my baby was poisoned," he said, "there is a thought that comes to me so horrible that I cannot think of."

"He was all I had in the world and I was looking forward to bringing him up to make a man of him and one who would make his mark in the world. Now God has taken him away from me and it has nearly broken my heart."

DRIVER KILLED IN QUINCY RUNAWAY

QUINCY, Aug. 26.—Crushed between the pole of his wagon and a tree, John E. Foster of No. 255 Warren street, Roxbury, a driver for Wood, Pollard & Co. of Boston, died of internal injuries. Foster was trying to stop his horses, which were running away, when he was hurt.

When the horses bolted Foster was standing up in the wagon with his back to them. The sudden start threw him to the pole, where he tried to get hold of the reins. He got one rein, which drew the team to one side of the road. The horses tried to go around a big elm tree, one on either side, and as they swerved Foster was thrown to the point of the pole and an instant later was pinned against the tree. Both of his legs were broken and he sustained internal injuries.

WOMEN AUTOISTS END TRIP TO COAST

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 26.—Brown from exposure to the sun and with pride for everything they have seen in California, two Jersey women who crossed the continent from Hackensack to San Francisco without assistance drove into Los Angeles in the same Maxwell automobile in which they started from the Atlantic coast.

They were Mrs. N. Powell and Mrs. W. A. Atwood. They came from the north by the coast route and one of the women drove the car nearly all the way. The two women will return to their home in the East in a few days.

GOODWIN IS STILL AFTER MATTHEWS

"The personal estate of Nathan Matthews was fixed by the assessors in 1908 at $45,000. This year Mr. Matthews swears that it is worth only $10,100. Perhaps Finance Commissioner Sullivan had this in mind when he said, recently: 'It is difficult to assess personal property.'"—Councilman Frank A. Goodwin.

"Nothing to say."—Ex-Mayor Matthews.

"Nothing to say."—John A. Sullivan, chairman Finance Commission.

Boston's business and political world is wondering to-day just how much more ammunition Frank A. Goodwin has got to disclose about the manner in which Ex-Mayor Matthews's tax bills have been adjusted by the Board of Assessors.

Goodwin's latest disclosures concerns the valuation of Mr. Matthews's personal property. He offers the following table of Matthews's personal valuations copied from the official records in the assessors' office at City Hall, to prove his statement:

| | Amt. taxed on personalty |
|---|---|
| 1901—Fixed by assessors at | $25,000 |
| 1902—Fixed by assessors at | 25,000 |
| 1903—Fixed by assessors at | 25,000 |
| 1904—Fixed by assessors at | 20,000 |
| 1905—Fixed by assessors at | 15,000 |
| 1906—Fixed by assessors at | 40,000 |
| 1907—Fixed by assessors at | 40,000 |
| 1908—Fixed by assessors at | 15,000 |
| 1909—Sworn statement of Matthews | 10,100 |

Goodwin Raps Sullivan.

John A. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission and intimate friend of Ex-Mayor Matthews, comes in for a share of criticism in Goodwin's statement. "On the day when the disclosures were made on the matter of the whole sale abatements on Nathan Matthews's property," says Goodwin, "that gentleman and John A. Sullivan had a conference at the Parker House, and, doubtless, planned the present attack upon the City Council in order to distract attention from this distasteful subject of taxation. Shortly after the conference Mr. Sullivan gave an interview in which he is reported to have said: 'There is no question in my mind but that it is a difficult proposition in this city to assess personal property. The rich men in Boston are hard to find.'

"The disclosures related only to the abatements on the real estate owned by Nathan Matthews. Perhaps the following table of Mr. Matthews's personal taxes may account for the fact that personal property was on Mr. Sullivan's mind."

Goodwin's table, coming next in the ammunition in the minds of Boston folks, especially the City Hall element, to-day. When Councilman Goodwin made his first charges about Mr. Matthews's ability to have his property untaxed—the Oxford Hotel properly—he made this significant remark:

"And More to Come."

Soon after there followed his disclosure of abatements of taxes on real estate listed under Mr. Matthews's name. Once more he said:

"I am not yet through with Mr. Matthews."

BALLOON STARTS 100-MILE FLIGHT

NORTH ADAMS, Aug. 26.—William R. Cross and D. W. Goodrich, both of New York, ascended in the aeronaut Nora No. 1 at 4:10 A. M. to-day. Before landing they expected to cover nearly 100 miles. The balloon started off in a northwest direction, but the wind shifted and after sailing completely around the city the bag when last seen was going toward the southeast.

The other is based upon the alleged trover and conversion of a watch, chain and other jewelry, valued at $500, which she claims her husband is unlawfully retaining.

Mrs. Allen's response is a suit to recover $10,000 damages from Ludwig J. Rocherolle, the alleged alienation of Mrs. Allen's affections. ## WOMAN KILLED BY TRAIN

LAWRENCE, Aug. 26.—Katherine O'Connor, forty years old, of No. 37 King street, was instantly killed on the Broadway crossing of the Boston & Maine Railroad to-day. She waited for the passage of a freight train and stepped out upon the track to be struck by a Boston bound express.

GAVE LIFE TO SAVE COUSIN

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 26.—Charles E. Chase, 67, a Boston man spending the Summer at North Weare, died going to the assistance of his cousin, John H. Chase, who he thought was drowning.

They were rowing through a mill dam canal when John Chase went ashore to open the dam gate to allow the boat to pass through. While he was wrestling with the heavy sluice gate he lost his balance and was sucked against the narrow opening through which the mill race was running.

Charles Chase seized the little craft to the assistance of his cousin. The little boat jammed against the side of the sluiceway and Chase was thrown out and drowned.

SUNDAY HORSE RACES TO ASSIST A CHURCH

EDGEWATER, N. J., Aug. 26.—Trotting horses will race next Sunday at the old Guttenberg race course for the benefit of the Church of the Holy Rosary here, under the auspices of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association.

Most of the competing horses are familiar to the speedways of New Jersey, Essex and Hudson counties.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

BOILER SAVED HIS LIFE.

TAUNTON, Aug. 26.—A tin wash boiler over his head saved nine-year-old George McCaffrey's life when he ran into a trolley car. But the boiler got all the dents, though George was mauled about in the mud by the fender of the car and frightened almost out of his wits.

GREAT RIFLE MEET IS ON

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 26.—The matches of the National Rifle Association of America began on this range to-day.

The Leech cup, Wimbledon cup, Long range marine corps match, and the President's match attract the most attention of the individual matches. The first two have been contested for so often as to be historic. The Leech cup is shot at 800, 900 and 1000 yards. Captain K. K. V. Casey of Delaware carried off both of them last year.

The winner of the President's match will receive a personal letter of congratulation from President William H. Taft, and the man making the highest average in the President's and the national individual match will receive the title of military champion of the United States.

The marine corps match is a new one for which the officers of the U. S. marine corps have supplied a $1,500 trophy. The conditions call for twenty shots at 600 and 1000.

CUMMINGS TO FIGHT PARKER FOR SENATE

John J. Cummings of Ward 20, who made the fight against Senator Frederic W. "It's a Happy Habit"

Van Camp's is Natural Milk

Condensed Milk is Not

This is how condensed milk differs from Van Camp's—in cost and quality and service. Please learn the facts, then judge which you want to use.

Many people still cling to condensed milk because they don't know why Van Camp's has displaced it.

They pay twice as much as those who use Van Camp's, and they get but half of the service.

So we deem it wise, in the interest of all, to publish these important facts.

Nothing But Milk

Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk with two-thirds the water evaporated.

Nothing whatever is added—no sugar, no starch, no preservative. Nothing is subtracted save water.

Our evaporating plants are located in six states, and all of them are close to our dairies.

The fresh milk is there placed in a vacuum. And a very moderate heat, because of the vacuum, throws off the water in steam.

We reduce the milk until it shows 8 per cent butter fat—about 28 per cent total solids.

The milk is sterilized after the cans are sealed. We do nothing else to preserve it.

Six Cents per Quart

The tall can of Van Camp's contains sixteen ounces of evaporated milk—a full pint and full pound.

The can costs ten cents when you buy by the can, and less when you buy a case.

If you replace the water which we take out, you have whole rich milk at about six cents per quart.

It is cheaper than raw milk, because the cost of raw milk lies largely in the cost of daily delivery.

Condensed Milk is Nearly Half Sugar

Condensed milk may be also evaporated somewhat, for the purpose of reducing the bulk. But then sugar is added—from 40 to 50 per cent.

That was the old way of preserving milk before sterilization came in to displace it. And makers are very glad to have users cling to it, because the sugar cheapens the milk.

But remember this: About half that you pay for condensed milk buys nothing but preservative sugar.

A 10-cent can of condensed milk contains only 12 ounces. A 10-cent can of Van Camp's contains 16 ounces—just one-third more.

Then, nearly half the condensed milk is sugar, for which you are paying twice what sugar is worth. Think what those differences mean in a year.

Another Waste

But here is another waste more important still:

Condensed milk, being sweetened, is fit only for table uses. You must use other milk for your cooking.

Van Camp's goes twice as far on the table, because it is twice as rich. And for cooking it is the best milk in America.

In milkman's milk you rarely get the whole milk. The butter fat rises and the solids fall. The milk one uses for cooking is hardly a half milk, usually.

In Van Camp's you get the whole rich milk, just as it came from the cow. You get all of the butter fat, all of the solids. Van Camp's gives to milk dishes a richness and flavor which you never get from raw milk.

Once prove this fact and you'll never go back to the milkman. Nor will you use sugared milk.

A Cow in the Kitchen

Van Camp's means a cow in your kitchen. It means milk or cream for any purpose ready when you want it.

It means great economy, for it is cheaper than raw milk and it involves no waste.

It means such delicious milk dishes as you never can make without it.

Think of paying twice the price for condensed milk and getting only half of the service.

Van Camp's Milk is sold in 5 and 10 cent cans—at your grocer's. The 10-cent can is the more economical and grocers give discounts on cases. The 10-cent cans contain 16 ounces while all 5-cent cans contain only 6 ounces. It is put up at our dairies in six states by the Van Camp Packing Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 26.—A natural gas well has been struck in the yard of the Allegheny County Jail. It is believed that it will furnish enough fuel to heat and light the county buildings. While drilling an artesian well salt water was struck at a depth of 300 feet. The well was sunk an other hundred and sixty feet, when gas was reached.

FASTEST MARE TO RACE UHLAN AT READVILLE

The Readville track will be the scene of a trotting match on September 3 between Hamburg Belle, the mare who made a new world's mark at Cleveland, and the gelding Uhlan, a close second.

With Uhlan's nose on her neck as she flew under the wire, Hamburg Belle did the first heat in 2:01¼, clipping two seconds off the record made by Crosscut against The Abbott at Brighton Beach in 1901. She then took the second heat in 2:01¾. This was not as close a race, as Uhlan cast a shoe and loosened a quarter boot.

Directly after the race Hamburg Belle was sold to H. M. Hanna of Cleveland for $50,000, the record price for a mare. Mr. Hanna at once placed her in the hands of Joseph and Edward Madden of Lexington, Ky.

If Uhlan wins at Readville there will be a third match at Lexington.

HORSE NEWS
TRACK GOSSIP

Outside of El Gale, 2:15¾, and Alry Bell, 2:23¾, the horses of Frank Work have improved the class this year that they did last. El Gale will start in the pacing division of the American Derby at Readville.

* * *

The stallion Black Lode, 2:28¾, by Mountain Lode, dam by Mambrino Patchen, owned by C. Kingsley, Strong, Me., recently broke his leg and was destroyed.

* * *

E. A. Cowee thinks well of the idea of having for a big attraction at the Grafton Fair the pacing match between Lady Maud C., with three world's records to her credit, and Joseph Bendry, Jr., a dark horse. Bendry, Jr., has repurchased from H. O. Sokolik the trotting gelding Odmar, 2:23¼, and intends racing him in the matinees over the Greenfield Track in Worcester.

* * *

Springfield and Worcester have not met since to date in intercity matinees, or twice each year since 1905, in which decided Springfield has won six to Worcester 29. Of the victories for Springfield Dr. J. H. Carmichael is credited with seven taken by his horses, the most that any member of either club has won.

'IRON MAN' IS HOODOO NAME FOR PITCHERS

It is to be hoped by Gotham fans that the title of "Iron Man," which has been bestowed on Klawitter, one of the Giants' new pitchers, will not hoodoo him. Louis Durham, whose specialty was winning double-headers for Indianapolis last year, joined the Giants with Joe McGinnity's old nickname, and Durham did nothing for the Giants and nothing for the Toronto club, which soon turned his back to Mclnnes.

Ed Walsh was called the "Iron Man" of the American League last season. His career this year has been one of disaster. Scouts who have seen Klawitter perform say that he is a crackjack pitcher, not as good, perhaps, as Harmon of the Cardinals, who also is a Shreveport graduate, but nevertheless fully capable of holding his own in fast company.

Joe McGinnity is one of the few "Iron Men" who has had luck this year. The Newark magnate will not lend the Eastern League pitchers in percentage of victories, but he has a paying proposition in his club and is fully satisfied. Baseball has been declared a nuisance by the city fathers of Grand Rapids, and the club has not permitted to play in that city. Receivers of the stock corporation are controlling the team in hope to realize three-quarters of a mill on the dollar on the assets.

YOUNG LIPPO TO BOX TEDDY

There is some class to the boxing card the Apollo A. A. of Salem will put on for Monday night, as the paperweight championship will be decided.

Young Lippo, the little North End eight-five-pound wonder, is to box Teddy Murphy of Boston for the local champion championship of New England, and the fans will be due to see some fistic action in the ten-round scrap.

In the main bout of twelve rounds Young Jack Johnson, the undefeated colored middleweight, will mix mits with the tough Lynn fighter. Mike Sweeney and Gus Rogers appear in the first prelim.

BATES TO PLAY HARVARD SEPT. 29

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 26.—Manager Thornton of the Bates College football eleven has arranged the following schedule:

September 18—Fort McKinley at Lewiston.

September 25—Hebron Academy at Lewiston.

September 29—Harvard at Cambridge.

October 2—Brown at Providence.

October 16—New Hampshire State at Durham.

October 30—University of Maine at Orono.

October 23—Colby at Lewiston.

November 6—Bowdoin at Lewiston.

The Bates team lost heavily by graduation and men leaving college and almost a new team will have to be developed. Both the center and quarterback and their substitutes and both guards were graduated or have left college, so that the center of the team will have to be built up entirely new.

The old men available are Captain Cummings and Bishop ends, Cook and Chambers tackles, Conklin and Kenney halfbacks, and Sargent and Lovely full backs. The team will begin practice September 8, when the college term opens.

HARD BOUT WHEN THIS PAIR MEETS

Tom Foley of South Boston goes to Manchester to-day to eb ready to enter the ring to-morrow night for the third meeting with Young McDonough. Foley is in splendid condition for the mill. Faithful training has fitted him for a hard contest, but he expects to have an easy time with McDonough.

With Terry Martin and Connolly under the watchful eyes of the fans, interest is said to be on the increase in boxing in the mill town.

TROJAN A. C. IS OUT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

The Trojan A. C. who claim the championship of the State at sixteen and seventeen years, will defend the strong Warren of Neponset last Saturday, making fifteen wins out of seventeen games, and going to play the Roxbury Centrals, White Sox of West Roxbury and the team that won the championship at that average age in Fall River. By beating these teams they hope to safely claim the championship.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

The open tournaments at the Brockton Country and the Winchester Golf Club links this morning on their respective courses and the players went very evenly in both directions. Many in fact have planned to visit both courses on alternative days and thus have a chance for a change of luck if misfortune pursues them on their first day's play. There will be neat and gross prizes at both tourneys and all the diversions of the clubs will be open to the contestants.

* * *

Two noted absentees at the above two tournaments will be B. S. Evans and I. W. Small, both of whom are seen at nearly every open tournament during the Summer. Both of these players are at Maplewood, N. H., and are playing on the red jacketed golf team called the "Rovers." These two along with a few others make an almost invincible team.

* * *

The Belmont Springs Country Club, whose new golf course has been under improvements for some time, is now in splendid shape considering the length of time that the club has been formed. The course although rough in some places is interesting to play and the tennis courts are getting down into shape.

* * *

The White Mountain Golf championship is on at the Wentworth Golf Club this week, and many Boston cracks are among the entries for the event. The course is 18 holes and the bogey is 73.

* * *

The golfers and other members are busy at the Hatherly Golf Club down on the South Shore at North Scituate beach. A field day is in operation and is turning out to be a great success. Tennis, golf, baseball and water sports are among cards that are being listed on the program and many entries were received in each.

* * *

Now that the Essex County Golf tournament is over the players are reflecting on their good or perhaps poor rounds while those who had direct charge of the meeting look at this month's tourney as the biggest success that the club has ever scored in the line of open tournaments. The entry list reached 171 names while the actual number of players were slightly over 150, 145 of whom handed in cards. The enormous attendance, with the very representative class of players who participated, gives Essex County the credit of holding the most classy and successful golf tournament of the season.

* * *

This week a conflict in dates for the Summer tournaments results from the Brockton Golf Club and the Winchester Golf Club, both holding open tournaments on the 27th and 28th of this month. However, as the meetings are medal play, many players will visit one course on Friday and the other on Saturday, thus having a chance to play for both prizes.

4,000 MORE SEATS FOR BALL PARK

When the Red Sox return on September 4 and the local fans begin to pour into the Huntington avenue grounds once more there will be seating accommodations for 4,000 more spectators than there were when the team went away. The tremendous crowds that jammed the park when the team was last here convinced President Taylor that he would have to get busy at once, so he promptly made contracts for more seats.

There are being built a row of boxes in front of the grandstand extending from the alley that separates the grandstand from the fifty-cent seats back of first base to the fifty-cent pavilion on the third base side. There are to be seven three tiers in front of the fifty-cent pavilion. The price of box seats will be $1.50 and there will be exactly 192 of them.

There will be a big stand in centre field surrounding the big flag pole which will seat 3,500. There will be seats also to the left field bleachers to the right field fence. As the field is to be six feet high there will be room on the grass behind interference for the overflow crowd on days when it is necessary to put it there.

The fifty-cent seats back of third base are being extended to the gate in the left field corner and 200 seats have been added to the left field bleachers. The grass stand in front of the grandstand has been torn out and other changes will be provided for the reporters.

When the work is completed the total seating capacity of the grounds will be close to 25,000. When Mr. Taylor bought the club the seating capacity was less than 12,000.

AUTO RACERS CAMPING BESIDE THE MERRIMAC

By J. C. KERRISON.

Racing camps are daily being established along the Merrimac Valley course, and by Monday morning, when training commences, the great majority of the forty-four cars entered for the several events will be on hand.

One hardly realizes the vast amount of work that there is in the preparation of a race of the magnitude attempted by Lowell. There are months and months of earnest hard and continuous work in preparing the preliminaries and then in getting everything ready so that there shall be no mistake at the last minute.

A small army of men are now at work along the course completing the grand stand, turning and oiling the course, widening this, that or the other turn, and getting the circuit in such excellent condition that a chance of a repetition of the Indianapolis carnival of death is reduced to a minimum. The course was never in such condition as it is to-day and those who have seen it are thoroughly satisfied that it will be in record breaking shape for the days of the carnival.

The chief officials of the events will be on hand the early part of next week. President Lewis R. Speare of the A. A. A. and Starter Fred Wagner having secured quarters at the Vesper Country Club, while President Heintze and Chairman Hower of the contest committee will take possession of the former's camp along the Merrimac River. Chairman Becroft of the technical committee is due to arrive to-day and will immediately commence the inspection and weighing in of the different candidates for cup honors.

The holding of the flag to flag endurance and reliability contest from Denver to the City of Mexico under A. A. A. sanction and rules is now an assured fact. The rules which are practically identical with those governing the competition for the Glidden, Hower and Detroit trophies have been issued. The date of the start from Denver has been fixed for Monday, October 25, and the contestants will arrive at the Paseo del Reforma, in the Federal District of Mexico, the week of November 15.

The route will be from Denver by way of Trinidad, Colorado, Amarillo and San Antonio, Texas, crossing the border at Eagle Pass, instead of at El Paso, as was originally planned, and touching in Mexico the cities of Zacatecas, Aguascalientes, Celaya, San Juan del Rio, Tula and the City of Mexico. At the end of the tour the competing cars will be exhibited at a monster automobile show in Mexico City.

TURFMEN IN MIXUP OVER HORSE SALE

Through the sale of the well-known trotting mare, Lady Baritone, 2:13¼, to Colonel Chilsholm of Cleveland a few weeks ago, there will be a lot doing in the courts, as A. C. Hawkins of Lancaster has entered suit against Thomas C. Copp, W. L. Potter, Frank Potter and Frank C. Potter. An attachment for $5,000 against the defendants has been filed in Worcester, conspiracy and fraud being alleged.

Hawkins avers that through misrepresentation he was induced to sell the mare to Tom Copp for $1,200, the latter soon after parting with the trotter to the Cleveland millionaire for a large sum.

Last Spring Hawkins let W. L. Potter take Miss Baritone to the Dover track to be gotten into condition for racing. In a short time he was notified that the mare had absolutely no speed and would not be able to win money in her class. Then the Potters brought Copp into the deal, saying the last named was a member of the Dorchester Driving Club and would buy the mare at a price for speedway racing.

Believing the story that the mare was all in for racing, Hawkins let her go for $1,200. She was then shipped West, displayed remarkable racing form, and was sold for a price in the thousands, the defendants getting a big rakeoff. I getting the evidence Hawkins employed detectives.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

THIS IS THE DAY THAT EVERY loyal fan pulls hard for the Athletics to beat the Tigers, so all together for one mighty squeeze! We helped the Tigers win yesterday and the day before, and were pulling so hard for Jennings' men that we failed to shake the rabbit's foot often enough in the direction of Chicago, and the result was that the Red Sox didn't win, although they didn't lose, either. It's pretty hard work to drag for three games in one afternoon, but that's what we've got to do—two for the Red Sox and one for the Athletics. So get to work, boys, and work hard. The season will soon be over and then you can take a long rest and tell how it happened, and how you all helped.

MANAGER HARRY SMITH, OF THE Doves has discovered the real article in the way of a tonic to improve the batting of his men, and great things are looked for from the Doves. It was told in yesterday's American that Harry agured out that Beals Becker was not slamming the spheres as often as he should, so he took him to the bouts at the Armory, and had him watch the boxers at work. Becker can't catch the boxing gloves and imagine them baseballs coming at him. Did it work? Well, I reckon it did work. Four official times at the bat with four hits for a total of five bases. Smith threatens to take quite a bunch of his men to the bouts next week.

Boston, Aug. 23, 1909.

Dear Straight Dope—I am greatly interested in your columns, but can't get by. In Saturday's issue on the subject of play on names of ball players, you say "Never again, and I will say it in French, 'jamais encore.' Well, that's French all right, but a literal translation of never again and it will not convey the meaning you intended to explain. You should say 'plus jamais' French you will understand. For instance, the sentence, 'I'll never do it again' is translated 'Je ne le ferai plus jamais.'" Now are you on? FRENCHY.

Sorry I don't know you, Frenchy. If I did I'd invite you out to help me out down old demon rum. Do you know, ever since I used that jamais encore business I've been kind of hiding out for fear some one would call me on it. Just sneaking up the back alleys on my way home, you know, like we all do when we're carrying a package and don't want the neighbors to get next. I like that 'Je le, etc.,' a lot better, and on my day off next week I'm going to try to get it to stand still long enough for me to put it. Compreney vous?

Straight Dope, BOSTON AMERICAN—Will you please tell me how through your columns I can get tickets for the Langford-Ketchel fight to be held at the Harvard Club in New York? Yours truly, W. A. GRANEY. Cambridge, Mass.

Tickets will not be sold for the Ketchel-Langford fight. The show is given for club members only. Wait a minute; there's more of this. You can become a club member by making application to J. A. Woodman, 7 Water street, Boston, if you're all right. Your initiation fee will cost you 10, 20 or 30—dollars, not cents according to the kind of scrap you wish to occupy. Fine scheme that, eh?

JAMES HARVEY, 118 WASHINGTON street—The gunners of the United States Navy hold the world's record in shooting. You can join the Amateur Athletic Union by writing J. Frank Facey, 30 Prospect street, Cambridge. Registration will cost you 25 cents and you will have to pay to enter most of the meets. There is no law in English amateur athletics which bars one who works from competing as an amateur, but a sculler who works cannot compete for the diamond sculls at the Henley regatta.

DID YOU NOTICE HOW QUICKLY there was something doing down around that steel works strike near Pittsburg when Sheriff Addison Gumbert got on the job? Don't know Sheriff Gumbert? Same man. A lot of you remember him.

BALL TEAM GOES TO JAPAN.

Arrangements for games with the Washington University have not been completed, but games will be played. The team will sail on August 31.

UPON THE SAND

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ALL love that has not friendship for its base
Is like a mansion built upon the sand.
Though brave its walls as any in the land
And its tall turrets lift their heads in grace
Though skilful and accomplished artists trace
Most beautiful designs on every hand,
And gleaming statues in dim niches stand,
And fountains play in some flow'r-hidden place.

Yet when from the frowning east a sudden gust
Of adverse fate is blown or sad rains fall,
Day in, day out, against its yielding wall,
Lo! the fair structure crumbles to the dust.
Love to endure life's sorrow and earth's woe,
Needs friendship's solid mason-work below.

What Penelope Thought

He Looked Truthful for Such a Prevaricator

By KENNETT HARRIS.

"ETHELINDA told me a lot about you," said Penelope. "I went just out of curiosity to see if you were anything like she said you were."

"Was I?" asked Percival.

"Something like," vouchsafed Penelope, some respects you were and in others

His Honest Face Didn't Tally With What She Thought About Him.

ope. "It was a brown broadcloth tailor-made. Who was with me?"

"I had only eyes for you sweetheart," said Percival.

"Was it at our house or Ethelinda's?"

"Penelope," said Percival, with gentle dignity, "I must say that your questions seem to cast a sort of reflection on my veracity. They imply that the circumstances of our first meeting are not indelibly burned upon my memory, and implications and reflections and things like that hurt my feelings—wound me deeply. You must remember, dearest girl, that my attention in dressmaking is deficient and that I haven't the eye for color that you have. But you looked divine. That I know, and you needn't try to tell me that you didn't. What did you think about me?" No evasion now, no quibbling."

"I thought you had an honest face to be as awful a story-teller, as Ethelinda and everybody said you were," answered Penelope.

"Honest!" said Percival. "As a matter of fact, I'm not quite sure about you yet; you're so different from anything in the girl line I ever saw before."

"In the girl line!" protested Penelope. "You talk as if I were samples."

"And that's no disparagement," said Percival. "The sample is usually up to the standard of the goods. I thought you were the goods, to tell the truth."

"Did you think that you would ever fall in love with me?" queried Penelope.

"I fell in love right then," declared Percival.

"There wasn't any thinking about it. You know there never is any thinking when that happens—which explains so much."

"What does it explain, dear?" asked Penelope artlessly.

"It explains why thoughtful and well-considered engagements are generally failures somehow," Percival told her. "The more one thinks on such subjects, the more one is in doubt, and doubt isn't any kind of a foundation for happiness. I'll be honest and tell you that I got that out of a book. It said emotion was the true guide of love, and that you were to consult your heart and follow its dictates."

"And you?"

"Certainly did," replied Percival. "We had a constitution right away, and my heart dictated a sedulous, assiduous and persistent pursuit. 'Get busy,' says my heart."

"You didn't fall in love with me," said Penelope, accusingly.

"I hate to contradict you honey-bird," said Percival, hastily, "I think you are mistaken. If it wasn't me, it was a fellow whose distinguishing marks, height, weight, complexion and thumb prints corresponded with mine."

"Then tell me how you felt," demanded Penelope.

"How can I? expostulated Percival. "Don't you think you are asking a great deal?"

"I want to know," persisted Penelope. "I suppose if I say 'kind of woozy,' you will rail me down for talking slang, and if I say, my heart gave a mighty leap and began to turn somersaults, I think I'm back to mother-goose, objected Percival. "As nearly as I can remember, both statements would be correct. I know when you smiled, everything seemed to be going around and around and around."

"You seemed entirely taken up with Ethelinda."

"That was just my artfulness," said Percival.

"What did I wear?"

What She Thought of Him

"You were—let me see—you Rose some kind of a light, Summer frock, wasn't it?"

"Was it figured?"

"I think it was."

"What color was it?"

"Ink."

"That's doing pretty well," said Penelope.

HIS DOUBTFUL STATUS

"Engaged to that beautiful girl, and yet not happy?"

"Well, she's gone in by turns for rowing, and tennis, and horses, and golf, and—"

"Say on."

"Sometimes I wonder if I am a sweet heart of merely a fad."

A SONG OF ROSES

By ETHEL CLIFFORD

YOU say your heart has dreamed a place for me
Where banks of roses are so thickly set
A man might thrust his hands an arm's length deep
And find but roses, roses all dew-wet.

How did you know the place my heart had dreamed,
The silent place of roses and of sleep
Where I would lie and none should know me there
Or reach me through the roses strewn so deep?

Not even you should know the secret way,
The hidden-door into my hiding place,
Where I would lie forever, with closed eyes,
And sleep, with dew-wet roses on my face.

Percy the Dress Agent

He Bares the Wickedness of Stenographers

By HANK

"THIS affectionate pie is fierce," said the Show Girl to Percy as she discovered a piece of pastry with vicious dabs of her fork.

"Affectionate?" ejaculated her companion. "What the dickens——"

"Aw, the bottom crust is struck on the top one," explained the Show Girl wearily.

"Never again" and "Th at's what they all say"

"Do and learn stenography and polish up your grey matter. You're dead slow, Percy; honest, you are."

"And how would stenography benefit me, Miss Politic? Tell me that," said Percy.

"It would take the kinks out of your think tools," she replied. "You have to think quickly to be a stenographer. Look at the situations they get up against sometimes when they have to give a mental imitation of a lighting flash. I was one once."

"I heard you say so," admitted Percy.

"Yes and I was a good one, too," said the Show Girl, "I don't doubt it," agreed Percy.

"Yes, and it's a hard life," said the Show Girl. "For instance. Some young chap comes into the office who you never seen before. He says good morning and you give him a look that would split the Singer building in two thinking that he's trying to be fresh. What happens. He turns out to be the boss's best customer, and the first thing he says to him is:

"'Say, your stenographer is very ill tempered, isn't she? That gets the boss down on you and that means your finish.

"Why, when I was drawing flashbooks for my work was sizing up people at a moment's notice and figuring whether they was designing or just playful. That's why I got out to go into this business. There ain't no puzzling features about this game like that to keep you worried."

Stenography Too Hard for Her

"True," said Percy, "and stenographers is designing themselves, sometimes. I had an experience with one once that I'll never forget. This stenographer was a male and had a great idea in his head that he was a humorist. Maybe he was, but I didn't think so.

"I got a present from my uncle one day that made me feel like a million aire. It was my treat, so I took some of my friends—the stenographer was one of them then—out to give them a good time. We had one all right. The next day I wandered into the club and saw the following on the bulletin board:

"'PLAYFUL PERCY

"'A stenographic record of some of his adventures.'

"Let me explain right here," said Percy, "that this stenographic cuss had consumed nothing but seltzer all night, and had taken his notebook along to get 'humorous impressions.' Well, this is what he had written below:

"'9:30—Percy put the wrong end of a cigarette into his mouth. Listen to him lisp to-day.

"'9:10—Percy tried to set his watch by a taxicab clock and offered to bet the chauffeur $50 he was fast. Percy always was a wise one.

"'10:05—Percy tried to read the lines on a waiter's forehead. Said the life line showed the waiter was a slippery customer. Right after that the waiter dropped an armful of dishes. Oh you palmist!

"'11:30—Percy tried to sing. No comment on this needed.'

"Percy went on, 'I won't repeat any more for fear of incriminating myself too much, but that fixed me with stenographers.

"I'll tell you one more thing he wrote on that bulletin board, though. It wasn't bad, and was very appropriate. I copied it so that I wouldn't forget it. Here it is," and Percy pulled out a piece of paper with fish hooks on it.

"It's," murmured the Show Girl, "that reads 'Never Again.' You should have added this," and she wrote a few lines under the stenographic line on Percy's paper.

"And what may that read?" asked Percy.

"That's what they all say," replied the Show Girl.

The Debt of Cheerfulness We Owe Our Family and Friends---By Dorothy Dix

ARE you in debt?

Morally, I mean. I take it for granted that you pay your butcher and baker and grocer and tailor, but there are other obligations besides those that we can settle with a check—people to whom we owe accounts that we cannot top with dollars and cents.

There is, for instance, the debt of happiness and cheerfulness that we owe to the world at large, and especially to those with whom we live.

Of course there are some few people who are poor, and sick, and maimed, and afflicted who seem to have received so little good from fate that they have, perhaps, a right to be morbid and melancholy and peevish and grouchy.

The most of us, however, have found this a pretty good old world. We have always had enough to eat, and enough to wear, and we have had a troubled the doctors enough to be able to boast about our ailments, and we have been surrounded by people and services who have done their best to make us happy, and who have given us more love than we deserve.

A Debt of Cheerfulness

Strictly speaking we have nothing to complain about, and we should be mortally offended if we knew ourselves to be objects of pity among our acquaintances, and yet we go about filling the air with great gobs of gloom.

It doesn't occur to us that the only return we can make for the good we have received is to be happy and cheerful, and that we have small excuse for not doing so.

Human nature isn't half as bad as the pessimists say that it is, and the greatest pleasure that most of us have is in giving pleasure to some one else. This noble and altruistic impulse is, however, strangled in its birth by the fact that so few make any return for favors received. You break your neck trying to do something for them that they will enjoy, and they glower through it without even pretending that they are having a good time.

Did you ever invite two people to see you, one of whom enthused over every plan made for her enjoyment, while the other went about with the air of an early Christian martyr, enduring affliction she had not deserved?

You know how you felt about it. You felt that you had made a fool return for your hospitality while the other had defrauded on her debt.

Some way in domestic life. Suppose a woman is married to a man who is good and kind, and considerate, and generous to her. He does his level best to make her happy. How can she repay him except by showing appreciation and enjoyment of all the good things he lavishes upon her?

If the woman is fretful, and whining and complaining, isn't she absolutely dishonest because she pays her husband not the pleasure in his home that he has a right to expect?

I know a case of this kind. The man adores his wife and bestows upon her a beautiful and romantic love and tenderness that would make the ordinary woman feel that God had given her her full share of blessings just to be so loved. In addition this man is very successful in business, and he delights in surrounding his wife with every luxury that money can buy. The man is a jolly sort of fellow, and he would be the happiest person alive if his wife was cheerful and light-hearted and would meet him with a glad, sweet smile.

But she never does. She is always sunk a thousand fathoms deep in melancholy, and having no real trouble of her own she has borrowed all in the neighborhood. Often when I look at her woe-begone countenance and listen to her dismal croaking, I wonder that it doesn't occur to her that she is making a pretty poor return to her husband for all that he does for her.

Nor is the wife the only one that defaults on the moral obligation to make a home happy. No matter what else a man does for his family, unless he is pleasant and cheerful in his own house he has failed. Wives and children of the first essential of life. There are plenty of men who consider themselves model husbands and fathers yet the mettle of whose latch key in the lock sends the temperature of the house down to the freezing point, hushes the innocent gaiety of the children, and makes the air heavy for the cellar.

A Defaulter of Home Joys

These men never speak to their wives except to utter a biting criticism, nor to their children except to reprove them, and even in their most pleasant hours, sit up wrapped in a grouch that chills the very blood of the beholder. Such a man is a death head at the feast of life, and a perpetual day his family ever knows is when it attends his funeral.

Such a man may be scrupulously honest in business. He may spend on his track before he would be tricky enough to give a customer sanded sugar or short measure, or palm off an indifferent substitute for a good article, but he never thinks that the gold brick artist is simply a piker in the swindling line compared with the man who leads an unsophisticated young girl to marry him under the belief that she is getting some one who will be attentive and considerate to her, and who then treats her with surly brutality.

No support, no money, can even repay a good wife for all that she sacrifices and does for her husband. That debt can only be settled by love and tenderness and helping her to make a happy and pleasant home.

Both men and women default on their moral obligations to each other. That is the reason that so many marriages end in bankruptcy.

By GASTON LEROUX.

"THE oldest skull in the history of humanity!" he echoed. "Does it lie? It is Old Bob's skull! Look at it! Oh, I can tell you, Old Bob never goes anywhere without his skull!"

He took up the doleful object and began to caress it, his eyes sparkling and his thick lips parting once more in a broad smile. His wrath was almost as fleeting as his mirth, and even Mme. Darsac could not refrain from laughter, for, in truth, Old Bob, with his "oldest skull of the human race," was a droll sight to see. I must acknowledge, too, that a third two hundred thousand years old is not such an unpleasant sight as one might expect it to be, especially when, like this one, it has all its teeth.

Suddenly Old Bob grew serious. He lifted the skull in his right hand and placed the forefinger of the left hand upon the forehead of his ancestor. And I had no further inclination for laughter. Old Bob seemed to me terrifying, horrible, as false as the Father of Lies, with his counterfeit gayety and his scientific farces. My eyes remained fixed upon him as if they were fascinated. It seemed to me that I could see his hair move, just as a wig might do. One thought—the thought of Larsan, which never left me completely, seemed to expand until it filled my entire brain. I saw Robichon looking at me with an expression which I did not know how to read.

"What is the matter, Sainclair?" whispered the latter, anxiously.

"My friend," I returned, in a tone as low as his own, "I dare not tell you; you would make sport of me."

He drew away from the table, and we walked toward the west boulevard. After he had looked closely on every side and made sure that no one was near us, he said:

"No, Sainclair, no; I won't make sport of you, for you are in the right in what you say everywhere around us. I feel that he is here."

I said to Roulettabille, scarcely daring to put into words what was in my mind:

"Old Bob?"

He did not answer.

Roulettabille and me alone in the west boulevard. It was there that Pere Jacques came to look for me. He brought me a telegram. Before reading it, I congratulated him on his perspicacity, but he showed no trace of the fact that, like all the rest of us, he had passed a sleepless night; but he informed me that the pleasure he experienced in seeing Mlle. Mathilde happy had made him ten years younger. Then he told me that, from some information in regard to the motives for the attempt to kill Mlle. Stangerson, were good, the world, Larsan, were good, the world, Larsan, were good, the world, Larsan

SOCIETY GIRL STEALS FROM MRS. GOULD

RHEIMS, Aug. 26.—During her excitement over one of the wonderful aeroplane flights here, Mrs. George Gould of New York hurried from her box to congratulate the aeroplanist, leaving her handbag on the seat unguarded. A few moments later she returned to find the bag gone.

Its contents were money and jewelry to the value of $6,000 and included one ring, set with diamonds, given Mrs. Gould by her husband during their recent stay in Paris. This ring alone was worth $4,000.

Mrs. Gould reported her loss to the police, who have not yet discovered the thief but believe that a society girl sitting in an adjoining box took the jewels.

An American, whose name is withheld by the police, also reported that he had been robbed by a woman of $3,000. The police are working on both cases.

This Is No COMIC Picture

There Is Nothing More Pathetic Than the Endless Patience of Mothers in the Eternal Rain of Childish Questions.

NOTHING MORE IMPORTANT AND VALUABLE THAN PATIENCE

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

This picture by Jack Sears we reproduce from the copyrighted columns of Judge.

It is by no means a comic picture, although it may seem comic to those who know nothing of motherhood and its responsibilities.

Millions of women stand during the best years of their lives in a deluge of childish, tiring questions. In millions of homes the eternal "ma, ma, ma-ma, mother" echoes every day, and hour, and minute.

There is nothing more marvellous than the patience with which the mothers answer the eternal questioning.

AND THERE IS NOTHING MORE IMPORTANT TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF CHILDREN THAN THIS PATIENT, CEASELESS ANSWERING.

The mothers, of course, grow tired and fretful sometimes. The fathers, away from home nearly all day, and bearing a very small part of the load of home, get impatient quickly. It is from the father and not from the mother, usually, that the child receives a rebuke.

The mothers are patient with the children, first, because of the inexhaustible supply of affection and tenderness with which maternity fills the hearts of women, and, second, because WOMEN KNOW THAT CHILDREN GET NINE-TENTHS OF THEIR EDUCATION IN VERY EARLY YOUTH.

The questioning child is tired, as well as the mother who answers the questions.

A child is born with its brain a blank sheet, nothing written on it. It knows no language, no facts. EVERY HUMAN BEING MUST LEARN EVERYTHING FOR ITSELF ALL OVER AGAIN. It inherits no knowledge—only a brain hungry and ready for knowledge.

And parents should always remember that every human being gets the greater, the most important, part of education BEFORE THE AGE OF SEVEN YEARS.

Often foolish fathers rebuke the mothers for their patience. But it is lucky for the world that the mothers are so patient.

Remember that everything must be told, not once, but many times, to be remembered. The language must be learnd by ASKING what the words mean. The brain is developed by answers to all of the questions that arise.

It is not pleasant to stand as this poor woman does in the eternal rain of questions. But her suffering and patience are the price of the education of childhood.

Liberty for the Hooker-Ups!

The emancipation of the married man is near. There is an invention whereby a woman's dress, gown, sack, skirt and the other articles of feminine apparel may be fastened or unfastened by simply pulling a string.

There is to be no more swearing, or, rather, no further excuses for uttering naughty and explosive words because your wife is late coming downstairs.

That dear and devoted creature who bears your name can now hook up herself by means of a patent attachment, while you are feeling in your pockets for subway fare.

Heaven at last is smiling on you, oh, you slaves of the "Hooker-ups" brigade. And oh, joy, and oh, you genius who invoked the blessing!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

ON CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Reading the article on kindness to animals by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, I cannot help to tell you how much I appreciate the very worthy subject discussed in your paper. I feel sure if this thing were written about more it may impress the parents of families to teach their children not to abuse and torture their pets and stray animals. I personally know a lady who for years has befriended homeless cats and dogs, feeding them and rescuing them from inhuman boys who torture animals for their own amusement. These are the children who grow up into worthless manhood, and ladies, living with homeless animals in general, being enlightened person should report to the society of people who move away leaving their dogs and cats behind.

NEW PENNIES TOO LARGE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

While there is so much talk in the papers just now about the new Lincoln pennies, permit me to call your attention to the fact that they are a little larger than the old ones and cannot be used in most of the penny slot machines.

What are the children and chewing gum men going to do?

Do you suppose this could have been overlooked when they were designed?

ELBERT HUBBARD'S ARTICLE

—ON—

A. T. STEWART, THE GREAT MERCHANT

Especially Written for the American

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHEN His Excellency Wu Ting Fang was asked what country he would live in if he had his choice, his unhesitating answer was: "Ireland."

The reply brought forth another question, as his secretive and clever excellency knew it would, namely, "Why?"

"Because Ireland is the only country in the world in which the Irish have no influence."

Also it might be stated, although it has nothing to do with the case, that the Jews are very much more influential in New York City than they are in Jerusalem. The Turk is to Palestine what the English are to Ireland.

The human product has to be transplanted in order to get the best results, just as the finest roses of California are shipped near Powers Four Corners, Monroe County, New York, and then shipped to the West.

A new environment means, often, spiritual power before unguessed. The struggle of the man to fit himself into a new condition and thus harmonize with his surroundings brings out his latent energies and discovers for him untapped reservoirs.

It was Edmund Burke who said, "The Irish are all right, but you must catch them young."

When England wants a superbly strong man she has to send over to Ireland for him. Note Burke, her greatest orator; Swift, her greatest satirist; Goldsmith, her sweetest poet; Arthur Wellesley, her greatest fighter—not to mention Lord Bobs, all awfully Irish.

And to America comes Alexander Turney Stewart, aged twenty, and very Irish, shy, pink, blue of eye with downy whiskers, intending to teach school until he could prepare himself for the "meenistry."

It was the year 1820; and at that time the stars of the Irish schoolmaster were in the ascendant. For a space of forty years, say from 1805 to 1845, 80 per cent. of all graduates of Trinity College, Dublin, came straight to America and found situations awaiting them.

Young Stewart had been at Trinity College two years, when by the death of his grandfather he found himself without funds. His father had died when he was three years old, and his grandparents had then taken him in charge. His mother, it seems, had married again, and was busy raising a goodly brood of Calibans, several of whom in after years came to New York and were given jobs at the A. T. Stewart button counter.

Young Stewart could have borrowed money to have kept him in college, for he knew that when he was twenty-one he would come into an inheritance from his father's estate. However, on an impulse he just sold his books, pawned his watch and bought passage for America, the land of promise.

The boy had the look of a student, and he had dignity, as shy folks often have. Also he had a Trinity College brogue, a thing quite as desirable as a Trinity College degree. Later, A. T. Stewart lost his brogue, but Trinity College sent him all the degrees she had, including an LL. D., which arrived on his seventieth birthday.

The Irish built our railroads, but Paddy no longer works on the section—he owns the railroad. Note the Harrimans, the Hannahans, the McCreas, the McDonalds, the O'Donnells, the O'Days, the Hills—all just one generation removed from the bog, and the smell of peat smoke still upon them.

The Irish schoolmasters glided easily from taking charge of the school into taking charge of our municipal affairs, for a considerable, and their younger brothers, their cousins, their uncles and their aunts found jobs yawning for them as soon as they had pushed past the gates of Castle Garden.

One year of school teaching in New York city, and A. T. Stewart reached his majority. He had saved just $500 of his salary, and he sailed away, back to auld Ireland, a successful man. Now he would go back to Trinity and complete his college course and be glorified.

All of which speaks well for young Master Stewart, and it also speaks well for his grandparents, who had brought him up in a good, sensible way, to work, economize and keep a civil tongue in his Irish head. His grandfather didn't exactly belong to the gentry—it was better than that—he was an Irish clerque who had become a scrivener, and then risen to a professorship.

A. T. Stewart was heir to a goodly amount of decent pride, which always kept him in the society of educated people, and made him walk with the crown of his head high and his chin in. He thought well of himself—and the world is very apt to take a man at his own estimate.

A year in "the States" had transformed the young man from a greenhorn into a gentleman. The climate of the West had agreed with him. He himself told how on going back to Belfast the city seemed to have grown smaller and very quiet. He compared everything to Broadway, and smiled at a jaunting car compared to a bus.

When he went to Trinity College and saw his class, from whom he had parted only a year before, all thought of remaining two years to graduate faded from his mind.

An ocean seemed to divide him from both teachers and pupils. The professors were stupid and slow; the pupils were boys—he was a man. They, too, felt the difference, and called him "Sir." And when one of them introduced him to a freshman as "an American," freshly bowed low, and the brevet of A. T. Stewart expanded with pride. Not even the offer of a professorship could have now kept him in Ireland. He saw himself the principal of an American college, "tilting" the pulpit of the college chapel on Sunday, picturing the fate of the unregenerate in fiery accents. The Yankee atmosphere had made him a bit heady.

The legacy left him was exactly one thousand pounds—five thousand dollars. What to do with this money he did not know! Anyway, he would take it to America and wisely invest it.

In New York he had boarded with an Irish family, of which the head of the house was a draper. This man had a small store on West street, and Alexander had helped tend store on Saturdays, and occasionally evenings when ships came in and sailors with money to waste lubbered and lubbered past.

The things you do at twenty are making indelible marks on your character. Stewart had no special taste for trade, but experience spells power—potential or actual.

With five thousand dollars in his belt in gold, he felt unconfortable.

And so on a venture he expended half of it in good Irish lace, insertions and scollop trimmings. Irish linens, Irish poplins and Irish lace were being shipped to New York—it could not be a loss. He would follow suit. If he was robbed of his money he could not at the same time be robbed of the drapery.

And so he sailed away for New York—and Ireland looked more green and more beautiful as the great uplifting green hills faded from sight and were lost to view in the mist.

A. T. Stewart became a merchant by accident. And he was the greatest merchant of his time. The year before his death he was worth forty million dollars.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

LAST nite there was a married cuppel calm to our house to play cards with Pa & Ma. Ma met the lady at a reshepshun about a month ago, and so she asked Pa & her husband to cum & see us, & so they calm last nite. There naim was Mister & Missus Mace.

Pa was all shaved up & had on his new sute & he was looking fine, & Ma was very happy, brekkus sumtimes Pa fergits to git shaved & says I guess I will let the old sute go along, a man's a man for all that. Wen the cuppany calm, Pa was interduced to Mister & Missus Mace, & then they all sat down to play cards.

By the way, sed Mister Mace, beefore we start in dealing the cards, have you much life insurance? Why, sed Pa. Do I look sick? Oh, no, sed Mister Mace, only I was jest wondering. That's rite, sed Missus Mace, I tiffuk that every man owes it to his wife to see that wen he dies she will have enuff munny to buy a nice new truso. It is awful embarrassing for a widow to be married in a shirt waist & skirt, sed Missus Mace.

I have five thousand life insurance, sed Pa, & that is all then I can afford to carry. Cut the cards, sed Pa. Then Pa commenced for to deal the cards, but Mister Mace sed to Pa, Jest a minute, beefore we play this hand, I represent the Rock-bound Insurance Co. of Maine & New Jersey. We point with pride to the number of widows and orfins which we have fed, sed Mister Mace.

I dount expeck to die for a few years, sed Pa. I am not exackly a yung man, & yet I am not a old one. I talk lots of exercise, & have naturally a fine constitushun, having spent my erly life on the pine oreds of the northwest. How much do you bid? sed Pa to Missus Mace, it is yure bid. I will bid two, sed Missus Mace, but I think you ought to think long & seerius about this insurance problem. It seems to me, sed Missus Mace, that a gentleman which can afford to live in a hous like this ought to be abel to carry at least fifteen thousand dollars insurance. How much munny do you mak?

Well, sed Pa, some weeks I mak more than others. This week was a bad one. I will bid three, sed Pa. That's good, sed Mister Mace, but I wud certainly like to gite you up for at least ten thousand dollars on our new endowment policy, wich will net you, if you live to be eighty (80) yeers of age, as much as five thousand dollars in cash.

Wen I git to be eighty (80) yeers of age, sed Pa, I will be all in. An old man doesn't want munny, Pa sed, he wants a nurse. But think of yure wife, sed Missus Mace. Woman is by nature a clinging creetur, she sed to Pa, & needs the sturdy oak man to stand by her side. My husband has me well protected.

I dount blame him, sed Pa. But my wife cud marry aggain the minit she wanted to, if I shud leave her a widow. My wife has a grate fassination about her, Pa sed, & if I shud die tonite the phone wud be ringing all day tomorrow. Now, sed Pa, is this a card galm or a meeting of the board of directors? Pa was gitting pritty mad.

Then Mister & Missus Mace played cards for almost half a hour before they sed anything moar about life insurance, but then Mister Mace sed, You look like a fine risk, & I have anything in my past life that wud mak you a un-desirabel risk? Only one (1) thing, sed Pa, I was in jail until a month ago, for nearly ten yeers. Mercy, sed Missus Mace, for what?

Then Mister and Missus Mace went hoam.

We are living in an era of expansion in more ways than one. For instance, now, from some indefinite source (you never can tell where to lay the blame, or else the credit for such things), comes the news that the directoire gown is to yield even the scant space it occupies, and to pass from sight to memory. In its place our sidewalks and street car seats are to be crowded with more voluminous skirts. The inhabitants of these costumes, free from fashion's policy of repression, will likewise expand to more normal conditions and comfortable sighs.
